SINGLE-FAMILY DUPLEXES MULTI-STOREY PROPERTIES

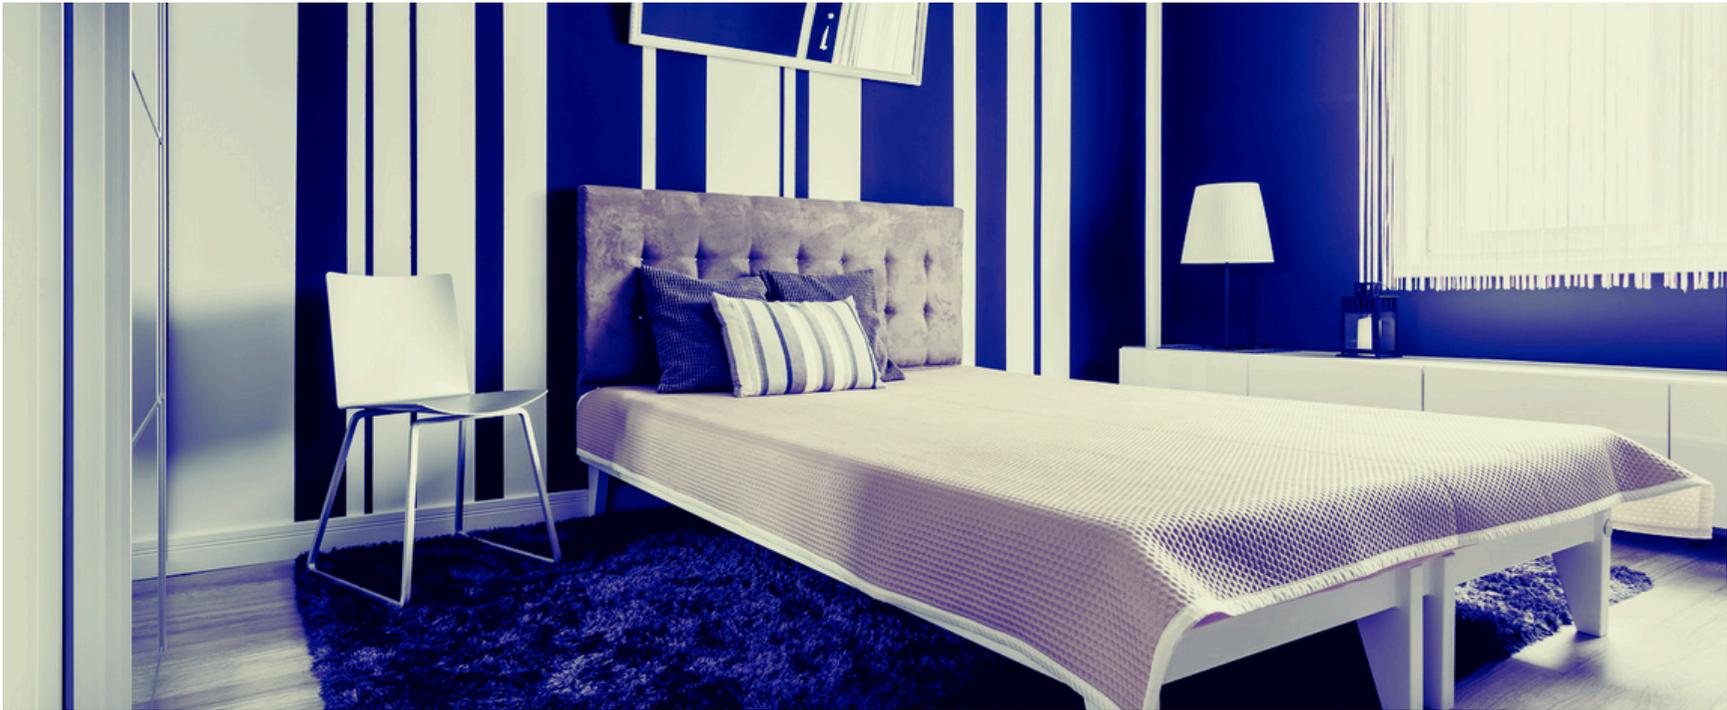

DIFFERENT DESIGN OPTIONS

Real estate investors often achieve greater profitability by increasing the number of rental units within a single structure. This approach not only maximizes rental income but also improves operational efficiency and return on investment.

At CRIM RESIDENTIAL, we have developed a range of thoughtfully designed new construction options tailored to meet the needs of investors seeking to build multi-unit properties. These designs are intended to help investors make the most of their land, reduce per-unit construction costs, and enhance long-term financial performance

We reserve the right to update or correct any errors, miscalculations, or inaccuracies found in our marketing materials prior to the final execution of the contract.

OPTION 8

- Partner with multiple real estate investors
- Use this method to assist you with growing your real estate portfolio faster
- Partner with like-minded individuals to achieve greater financial success
- Multi-family housing can help you increase your ROI exponentially year after year

If you're finding it difficult to secure the funds needed to purchase a multi-unit property, consider partnering with other real estate investors, trusted friends, or family members. Pooling financial resources can significantly lower the entry barrier to owning income-generating real estate. For example, one of our 20-unit buildings could be purchased by a group of four partners, with each partner owning an entire floor comprising five individual apartments. Each unit can be set up with separate utilities, allowing for independent management.

Ownership of the building's common areas, such as stairwells, hallways, and shared outdoor spaces, would be equally shared and clearly defined by a legal agreement. This collaborative business model is an effective and accessible way for investors to acquire and co-own a small to mid-sized apartment building.
