

Rotator Cuff Injuries

Experimental Procedure for Tissue Healing An experimental treatment modality, pulsed electromagnetic field (PEMF) therapy, has been used recently for patients with chronic rotator cuff tendinitis who do not respond to steroid injection or other forms of conventional conservative management (nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory agents and analgesics). 104 Seventy percent of the patients with recalcitrant rotator cuff tendinitis reported reduced pain scores and were reported to have increased ROM after PEMF treatment.

Citation:

Title: PHYSICAL THERAPY MANAGEMENT OF THE SHOULDER

Author(s): NITZ AJ

Source: PHYSICAL THERAPY Volume: 66 Issue: 12 Pages: 1912-1919 Published: DEC 1986

Vitality Wellness Center

2210 Encinitas Blvd, Suite G-2 Encinitas, CA 92024

Monday - Saturday by appointment

(760) 845-2905

www.enjoyvitalitywellness.com