Office Trends

Location shift from where executives live (suburban, executive housing) to locations where young brains want to be (urban, walkable, transit-served areas).

Square foot per employee ratios continue to shrink, with offices now averaging around 150 sf/employee on 2017 compared to 225 sf/employee on 2010.

In the past few years, Coworking has accounted for 10% of all office absorption in Charlotte. These Models are highly efficient and, while bringing more people into the office market (those who previously worked from home), the square footage per employee is very small at around 65 to 75 sf.

By 2040...

Office development will drop from 1.5M sf annually to under 1M sf annually

Retail Trends

Online retail will continue to capture more of the market, growing from 6% of market in 2013 to 14% by 2021.

There is an oversupply of retail space nationally. Charlotte has seen this trend and has only added 11.1 sf per person since 2011, bringing the city to an average of 20 sf per person.

Experiential Retail, like food halls, brew pubs, or rock climbing, is on the rise as many millennials value experiences more than dry goods.

By 2040...

Retail development will slow from 500,000-650,000 sf annually to around 300,000 sf annually

Rental Apartment Trends

Rental apartments account for more than ½ the units added in the Charlotte sphere since 2012.

The share of apartments built in current or future transit station areas (not including street car or center city) is up from 10% in 2001-2005 to more than 40%, indicating the City's support of transit.

Many suburban neighborhoods built between 1960 and 1980 lack a sense of place and walkability. These neighborhoods will need value creation (investments in parks, greenways, new schools, and policies encouraging / facilitating redevelopment) before handling higher density.

By 2040...

Rental apartment development will remain very high, at 50% of residential demand or 2,400 units/year

For-Sale Residential Trends

Townhouse development has shifted from a suburban alternative to an in-town lifestyle product.

People are moving away from single-family suburban neighborhoods and more towards intown and Activity Centers. These areas have high detached home prices, causing people to choose attached residential products as a price alternative.

Single family detached home development has slowed dramatically. In the 2000s detached single family homes accounted for 25% of the residential product being developed, today these homes only account for 14% of residential products being built.

By 2040...

Attached for-sale will continue gaining popularity, with around 500-600 new units/year

Single family becomes more challenging, with around new 1,500 units/year

Denver – Growth Strategy

PUBLIC REVIEW DRAFT - 8/6/18

Growth Strategy

Denver's next evolution will strengthen our existing neighborhoods through carefully planned infill development that enhances the city's unique character.

Growth Areas

- Regional centers- 45% of new jobs and 25% of new households
- Community centers and corridors- 20% of new jobs and 25% of new households
- High and medium-high intensity residential areas in downtown and urban center contexts: 10% of new jobs and 20% of new households
- Greenfield residential areas- 5% of new households
- Certain districts- 15% of new jobs and 5% of new households
- All other areas of the city- 10% of new jobs and 20% of new households

VISION

Denver's preferred growth strategy

- Guide most growth to regional centers, community centers and corridors, select districts and high intensity residential areas near downtown
- Ensure high growth areas are linked to existing or planned quality, high-frequency transit, specifically the medium- and high-capacity transit corridors from Denver Moves: Transit
