We are super excited to bring back Billy Goat after nearly six years. It's been a long road back with fires and Covid as huge stumbling blocks.

Fifteen years ago, Old Goat Steve Harvey directed the first Billy Goat (Ain't but one hill) mountain climb up Indian Truck Trail in the Cleveland National Forest.

This one hill race ran from 2009 to 2017. In 2018, the forest burned and the rest is history. With Steve's blessing, we're running Billy Goat again in 2024. Traditionally, the race ran in June to commemorate Steve's birthday. Traditionally, it was hot as hell. In 2024, we are still commemorating Old Goat's birthday but just a couple months early. The gnats will be fewer and the weather a tad cooler. We'll probably see some spring flowers too!

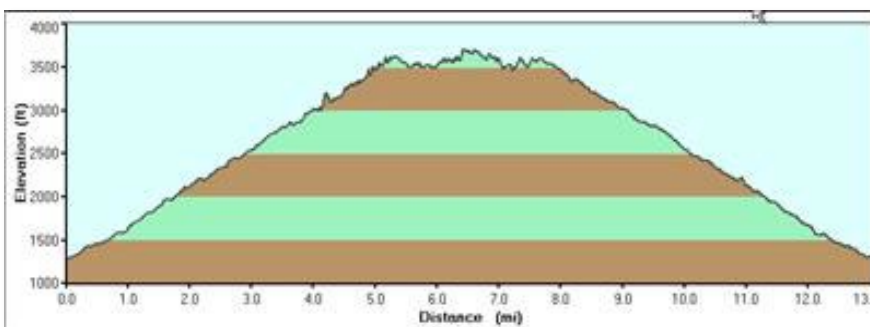

Join us in April for this old school trail adventure up Indian Truck Trail to The Main Divide & back (10k runners turn around half way up).

The Trail

Indian Truck Trail is a dirt truck trail that meanders up to The Main Divide in the Cleveland National Forest. The weather will most likely be cool in the morning and fair in the afternoon, as it often is in sunny Southern California. Don't get fooled with the spring time slot, it can still get warm out there, especially in the mountains. The 6.5 mile climb up has an elevation gain of about 2,500-2,800'.

Directions: Take I-15, exit Indian Truck Trail (ITT). From S I-15, turn right on ITT, from N I-15, turn left. From ITT, turn left onto La Palma and then right on Santiago Canyon Road. We are permitted to park along Santiago Canyon Road only, a short distance from Indian Truck Trail, Cleveland National Forest.
