After discussing my dating life or lack thereof, with my mother, I told her about a friend of mine who had been in a terrible car accident, broken both her legs and wound up marrying her orthopedic surgeon. My mother sighed, "Why can't anything like that ever happen to you?"

Did you hear about the sword -swallower who went on a diet? He was on pins and needles for six weeks!

I'd been secretly dating for several months, and it was time to break the news to my very protective father. My mother thought he would take it better if she explained to him that her boyfriend was a marine who had just returned home from Iraq. This pleased Dad immensely. "A marine? Good!" he said. "That means he can take orders!"

A minister recognized the young man standing at the back of the church one Sunday as someone whose wedding ceremony he had performed recently. After the service the young man wanted to talk to the minister. "Tell me, Reverend, do you believe that someone should profit from the mistakes of others?" "Definitely not," said the minister. "In that case, can I have back the $50 I paid you for the wedding?"

Once a wise guy was refused entry to a dance club for not wearing a tie. He went to his car, tied some jumper cables around his neck and approached the club again. "Okay", said the bouncer, "you can come in, but don't start anything."

While watching the Olympics, my mother turned to my sister and said, "You just know the athletics mothers are so proud of them. I'm proud of you girls, and you're nothing."

One day the four-year-old boy I babysit for told me he was going to have a baby sister. Knowing that his parents wanted more children, I asked, "So when are you going to get this baby?": "Daddy says as soon as I start sleeping in my own bed," was his innocent reply.

As a new parent, I've come to appreciate the sacrifices my mother and father made for me. For example, not long ago, I thanked my mother for all the time and money that was spent on me for orthodontics. "We had to," she said, "or you would still be living at home!"

My 5-year-old soon was badgering us to get him an iPad. "My friend brought one to school and I want one too" he insisted. "Absolutely not," said my husband. "They're very expensive and you are too young to need one. What would you do with one anyway?" "I'd put it on my eye and play pirates with my friends!"

A Jew, a Catholic and a Mormon were drinking at the bar following an inter-faith meeting. The Jew boasting about his virility, said, "I have four sons. One more and I have a basketball team!" The Catholic said, "That's nothing, I have ten sons. One more and I will have a soccer team!" The Mormon snorted, "Big Deal!" I have 17 wives. One more and I'll have a golf course!"

A note on the soda machine in our break room warned. "Diet cola isn't working. Beneath that, someone else had written. "Try exercise and a low carb diet!"

At the supermarket, a rambunctious child stopped moving long enough to stare at my neck brace. "What happened to her?" he asked his mother. Seeing it as a learning opportunity, she replied. "Maybe she wasn't sitting down in her grocery cart!"

If your wife keeps coming out of the kitchen to nag you, what have you done wrong? Made her chain too long!

I was thrilled to be moving into my own house, even though it was only a block away from my parents'. The first morning on my own, I relaxed on the porch and listened to some music enjoying my new independence. Then the phone rang. It was my father telling me to turn the sound system down.

I realized my family didn't get out enough when we went to a restaurant recently; We had just finished eating when my five-year-old son got up from the table and headed for the kitchen dishes in hand.

On the day of my father-in-law's funeral, our two-year-old son was appropriately somber, until he spied the coffin. "Oooh, Mama!" he shouted. "Look at that big suitcase!"
