The International Board for Regression Therapy (IBRT) has no relationship with any local, state, or national body, and certification by IBRT does not convey certification or licensing by any governmental body. IBRT-certified therapists are responsible for their own certification and/or licensing as required in their own jurisdictions.

The function of the International Board for Regression Therapy is to ascertain that IBRT-certified therapists have the appropriate background and training to conduct Regression Therapy in a professional manner. IBRT recognizes that each therapist selects his or her own methods for conducting therapy; thus, IBRT does not attempt to regulate methods. However, IBRT does encourage therapists to choose methods that are permissive and client-empowering rather than authoritarian or overly-directive.

IBRT also assumes no responsibility for the practices of an IBRT-certified therapist. IBRT's Code of Ethical Conduct and Practices is considered a part of this application. It is assumed that applicants will read and understand it before applying for IBRT certification. If a complaint about an IBRT-certified therapist is received by the IBRT Ethics Committee, the therapist will be notified and invited to present his or her view. After appropriate investigation, IBRT may dismiss the complaint, censure the therapist, or rescind IBRT certification.

I understand and agree with the above statements. I agree to practice according to the IBRT Code of Ethical Conduct and Practices.
