

Twanda Jones is the visionary founder and CEO of The Comfort Home Place, Inc., a grassroots nonprofit organization launched in 2016 to support victims of domestic violence. Through her personal experience as a survivor, Twanda created the First Night program to provide immediate emergency shelter, resources, and care for those fleeing abusive situations. Under her leadership, the organization has formed partnerships with Kroger, Meijer, Walmart, and the Domestic Violence Network (DVN). The Comfort Home Place is proudly listed on the 211 helpline and holds a Gold Star rating with Candid.

Twanda earned her bachelor's in public administration in 2020 and completed her Master of Public Administration (MPA) in 2024. When she's not advocating for victims, Twanda enjoys biblical word searches and hula hoop fitness classes. As a mother of two and a grandmother, she's passionate about creating safe futures for families in need.
