Re: Chapter #4 Targeted Casualty: Parental Rights / The Children

“But, you say, we destroyed the most hallowed of relations, when we replace home education by social... The Communists have not invented the intervention of society in education; they do but seek to alter the character of that intervention, and to rescue education from the influence of the ruling class.”

Karl Marx & Fredrich Engels, The Manifesto of the Communist Party

On February 22, 2013, the California State Assembly passed bill number AB 1266, known as The School Success and Opportunity Act. Hailed at the time by trans activists as a win for gender equality, AB 1226 requires that, “...a pupil be permitted to participate in sexsegregated school programs and activities, including athletic teams and competitions, and use facilities consistent with his or her gender identity, irrespective of the gender listed on the pupil’s records.” Teachers were told they could not prohibit a pupil from enrolling in any class or course, or counsel them in career choices based on the basis of sex they identified as. Trans students absolutely must have access to locker rooms of the opposite biological sex, because they wouldn’t be able to get the credits they need to graduate if they didn’t have a place to get ready for gym class. Trans students were being denied “important educational opportunities” when they are not allowed to participate in school activities based on who they are. ¹

The “gender revolution” [see Addenda #12, November 2025] blossomed in California, and by 2023 more than 84,000 children between the ages of 13 and 17 identified as transgender. This is what trans activists wanted to see, growth of the revolution. Under the guise of protecting the privacy of transgender students, they pushed the California legislature to pass Assembly bill number AB 1955: Support Academic Futures and Educators for Today’s Youth Act. Passed by the assembly along party lines (61-16), AB 1955 prohibited school districts from disclosing any information related to a pupils sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression to any other person, including their parents or legal guardians, without the pupils consent. The bill also prohibited legal action being taken against any administrator or teacher for helping hide the students gender identity from parents or guardians. “Our students must be safe in order to learn,” said state Superintendent of Public Instruction Tony Thurmond. Never mind the rights of the parents and guardians, to know what agenda was being promoted by California school districts and their teachers. ^{2,3}

The California state PTA endorsed activism by GSLEN (Gay, Lesbian and Straight Education Network), which states they have been : “Championing LGBTQ issues in K-12 education since 1990.” Their programs help develop “supportive educators” that implement LGBTQ content (known as inclusive curriculum) in their classroom curriculum, promote “comprehensive policies” that affirming trans and gender non-conforming students, and provide guidance to educators to implement “LGTBQI+ inclusive school libraries, instructional materials, and school internet access.” ^{4,5}

But apparently, there were still a few educators in the state of California that did not approve of the Board of Education's parental notification policies. In May 2023, two middle school teachers sued the Escondido Union School District (Mirabelli et al v. Olson et al) over its secrecy policy, which required teachers to follow the school's scheme to hide a student's gender transition at school. Teachers were told they must use a student's pronouns or gender-specific names at school while keeping that information private from the student's parents. One of the teachers claimed that she discovered from the school counselor that the name and gender of students were being changed in official school records without the knowledge or consent of parents. "It forces them to lie to parents and to deceive parents and to participate in a student's social transition," said Paul Jonna, the attorney representing the teachers. ⁶ As a result of filing that lawsuit, the two teachers, who had taught at Rincon Middle School for decades, were placed on paid administrator leave until a federal judge ordered the school to allow them back into the classroom eight months later.

On December 23, 2025, a U.S. district judge ruled that parents have a constitutional right to be informed if their minor child socially transitions their gender at school and that teachers have a constitutional right to inform parents of the transition. The ruling was hailed as a "historic win for parental rights" by supporters of parental rights, and a tragic loss of privacy rights by trans activists, who immediately went on the offensive and filed a counter suit. ⁷ On January 6, 2026, the 9th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals granted a request to halt the decision saying the district judge "expanded parental rights too broadly." The federal judge who ruled for the constitutional rights of parents was appointed by President George W. Bush, a strong pro-family policy Republican. The three judges ruling against the injunction were appointed to the bench by Democrat Presidents Barack Obama and Joe Biden, both of whom were strong supporters of gender equality. ⁸ A similar lawsuit filed on behalf of parents with children in the state school system, Chino Valley Unified School District v. Newsom, was dismissed by a U.S. District judge in April 2025. Judge Daniel J. Calabretta (appointed by President Biden), ruled that the plaintiffs' claims were too "speculative" and the "Parent Plaintiffs have failed to allege that they themselves will be injured." ^{9, 10}

The results of litigation were predictable. Conservative, pro-family/pro-parent judges ruled against California's gender secrecy laws and for parental rights. Progressive, pro-trans equality/gender identity care judges ruled for California's gender secrecy laws and against parental rights. California Governor Gavin Newsom, Attorney General Rob Bonta, Superintendent Tony Thurmond, the California PTA, the California Public Teachers Association and the majority of its member teachers are all in favor of taking away parental rights and handing them over to a public school system that will shape the beliefs of impressionable adolescent children and perpetuate revolutionary ideas.

"Give me four years to teach the children and the seed I have sown will never be uprooted"
Vladimir Lenin

There has been an explosion of diagnoses of gender dysphoria among adolescent children, ever since the Obama administration allowed medical coverage for gender-affirming care treatment to be covered by insurance companies. A 2022 study released by health technology company Komodo Health Inc. showed that new diagnoses of gender dysphoria in youths aged 6-17 skyrocketed 178%, from 2017 to 2021. ¹¹ This practice of rushing to affirm adolescent gender identity issues has led to a stunning 383% increase in the number of adolescent children ages 13-17 identifying as transgender in just eight years! During this five year period, the percentage of adolescent children identifying as transgender grew from 9.7% to 25.3% of persons of all ages identifying as transgender. ^{12, 13}

Not only did diagnoses of gender dysphoria and adolescents identifying as transgender skyrocket, so did the use of puberty blockers (by 119%), hormone “therapy” (by 122%) . ¹² Even worse was the revelation that gender-affirming surgical procedures also grew exponentially. Do No Harm, a self-described medical watchdog organization reported that between January 2019 and December 2023, 5,747 youths under the age of 21 underwent life altering and irreversible sex-change surgeries. ¹⁴ The Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP) was ranked #1 of the 12 worst-offending children’s hospitals promoting sex change treatments for minors. Dr. Nadia Dowshen, co-director of the Gender & Sexuality Development Program at CHOP defended performing surgeries on adolescent children saying, “...age is just a number... a child’s maturity is more important.” CHOP bills itself as “a national leader in supporting transgender children...” and have admitted to performing “top surgery” (removing or implanting breasts) on children as young as 14 years old. ¹⁵

Let’s discuss “maturity” for a minute... The World Professional Association for Transgender Health (WPATH) Standards of Care for the Health of Transgender and Gender Diverse People stated that gender dysphoria persisted into adulthood in only 6-23% of adolescents in a 2012 study they conducted. Instead of identifying as transgender, troubled adolescents were more likely to identify as “gay” and the majority of adolescents suffering from gender dysphoria, will outgrow the discomfort, and go on to live well-adjusted lives. ¹⁶ Adolescents in the age range of 13-17 have not even reached emotional and mental maturity at this stage. WPATH recognized this, stating that gender-affirming surgeries should not be performed before the age of majority, or 18 years old. Yet Dr. Nadia Dowshen, who argues that there is no biological differences between girls and boys in sports, is board certified as an Adolescent Medicine “specialist,” disregards WPATH Standards of Care guidelines in her own practice.

Marx and Engels saw the nuclear family as the vehicle that ensured the reproduction and maintenance of capitalism, preventing the revolution and reorganization of society. They, along with Lenin, saw the way to destroy the nuclear family was to take away parental rights and education of their children, giving it to state run schools. Progressive Democrats consistently take steps to promote the destruction of the nuclear family, attack the institution of marriage, and promoting abortion and the gender revolution by passing laws and enforcing them in the courts.

On March 31, 2025, globally recognized as the International Transgender Day of Visibility, House Democrats introduced H.R.2487, the Transgender Health Care Access Act into Congress. The Act would award $35 million in grants supporting “medical education programs and professional training” to support increased gender-affirming care in community health centers. According to The Human Rights Campaign, “the Transgender Health Care Access Act seeks to expand access to evidence-based, lifesaving health care for transgender people.” (Would you rather have a live son or a dead daughter?) The Human Rights Campaign is the nation’s largest LGBT activist organization, pressuring large corporations, hospitals, and politicians into implementing and expanding socially liberal policies. HRC leadership made 88 visits to the White House in the first year of the Obama presidency alone. The HRC was a big supporter in both of Joe Bidens presidential campaigns, including a $15 million “investment: in 2024 and Jill Biden praised the organization in a speech she gave at the HRC annual dinner in 2024. “Yes, the MAGA extremists are seeking to erase these hard-fought gains, trying to unwind all the progress we’ve made. They want us to be afraid. They want to take our victories away, but we won’t let them. Your President won’t let them. I won’t let them.” Funding from its PAC goes almost exclusively to support Democrat candidates, party committees and groups and lobbying for its progressive agenda. ¹⁷

On April 29, 2025, House Democrats reintroduced H.R.15, The Equality Act into Congress. Originally introduced in 2019 but never acted on, the Equality Act would seek to amend the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity, effectively making the transgender community a protected class. The concept of class struggle was introduced by Karl Marx. He claimed that societies are shaped by constant struggle between different groups of people, caused by the unequal distribution of wealth and power. Marx believed that a transition from capitalism to socialism to communism would end this struggle because everyone would be equal and there would be no classes. There has been a constant struggle between traditional society and special classes over the past several decades. These classes, created by the use of identity politics and promoted exclusively by progressive Democrats, have waged a campaign to obtain more rights, more protections, more privileges and more funding for themselves. Unlike Marx’s belief that a complete societal transformation would eventually eliminate classes, I don’t see this even happening. Groups, like the transgender community, have gotten too used to their increased power, control and wealth with the help of Democrat lawmakers and judges. I can’t ever envision that they would be content to be equal with everyone else in society.

Each of these carefully crafted policies have weakened the nuclear family a little more, bringing Marx and Engels’ goal of the reorganization of society a little closer to realization. Progressive Democrats still fight for transgender rights over parental rights today.

“Why are we here today? To make revolution.” “What kind of revolution? The cultural revolution”

Re: Chapter 2, Targeted Casualty: The Nuclear Family

Senate hearing erupts as OB/GYN refuses to answer if men can get pregnant

Fox 11 News, January 14, 2026

A board-certified OB/GYN and medical school professor refused to give a direct answer to Sen. Josh Hawley (R-MO), who repeatedly asked her if men can get pregnant during a Congressional hearing on Wednesday.

Dr. Nisha Verma, an OB/GYN representing Physicians for Reproductive Health, refused to give a “yes or no” answer to the question first raised by Sen. Ashley Moody (R-FL) and again by Hawley because she wasn’t certain what the “goal” was behind the question.

Dr. Nisha Verma is a 36 year old obstetrician and gynecologist, with a BA in Biology & Anthropology and a Doctor of Medicine (M.D.) Verma, who has previously testified in front of Congress on the harms of restricting abortions, was again testifying at a Senate hearing titled, “Protecting Women: Exposing the Dangers of Chemical Abortion Drugs,” when the incident occurred. The question any reasonable medical professional should ask is, what are chemical abortion drugs and are what dangers do they pose for women taking them?

Currently, medical abortions are self-induced by the woman who wants to prevent or terminate a pregnancy. The morning-after pill is a type of emergency contraception used in situations when typical birth control wasn’t used or failed, and in cases of nonconsensual sexual intercourse (rape). This pill is most effective at preventing pregnancy when it’s taken as quickly after unprotected sex as possible. There are two types of morning-after pills currently approved for use by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Pills containing ulipristal acetate, most commonly known as ella, are only available by prescription. Pills containing levonorgestrel, commonly known as Plan B One-Step, My Choice, Option 2, Take Action, Aftra and Preventeza, are available for purchase at most pharmacies in states where abortion is un-restricted. Mifepristone, also known as Mifeprex or RU-486, is typically taken once the woman realizes she is pregnant and wants to end the pregnancy up to ten weeks gestation. ^{1,2}

As with any medication, there are risks involved when taking chemical abortion drugs. An April 2025 study by the Ethics & Public Policy Center revealed that adverse events from the abortion pill mifepristone are approximately 22 times more frequent than the FDA currently recognizes. The study, compiled from health insurance claims databases of 865,727 prescribes mifepristone abortions from 2017 to 2023, noted that one in ten women who took the pill had at least one serious adverse effect including sepsis, infection or hemorrhaging. The report noted almost 41,000 Emergency Room visits and 5,700 hospitalizations of women who had taken chemical abortion pills. ³

Simply stated, mifepristone, as used in real-world conditions, is not “safe and effective.”

A 2009 study of more than 42,000 women from Finland, found that chemical abortions were associated with an adverse reaction rate four times that of surgical abortions, including an increased risk of hemorrhage and incomplete abortion. ⁴

Chemical abortion has been available in the United States since 2000, when the Food and Drug Administration first approved the use of mifepristone-misoprostol combination. The FDA released a report in early 2025 noting that an estimated 7.5 million women have used abortion pills since that FDA approval was issued. More than 4,200 women experiences an adverse effect from taking abortion pills, certainly not a significant percentage overall, but still significant to women who experienced severe infections, blood loss requiring transfusions, or were hospitalized after taking the pill. The event was certainly a significant event for the loved ones, family and friends of the three dozen women who died from taking the pill. Since the Obama FDA decided that only deaths must be reported in 2016, these numbers can be assumed to be significantly underreported; the data reported during the periods before and afterwards show this to be the case. ⁵

In January 2023, the Biden FDA approved the retail sale of abortion pills at pharmacies, just one month after the Office of Legal Counsel deemed chemical abortion was not subject to federal limits or mail-order regulations. In each case, previous regulations banned or limited the use of chemical abortion due to public safety concerns, but no longer was this a concern for the Biden administration. Currently, chemical abortion pills can be purchased in most drugstores in the 36 states where chemical abortion is legal. In states with abortion restrictions or bans, patients can meet with out-of-state providers online and obtain abortion pills in the mail with no physician visit required. Twenty-two states currently have laws to shield healthcare professionals from prosecution who provide abortion pills into states with bans. ⁶

The focus of that January 14 hearing was on the growing reliance of the use of abortion pills in the United States, which is estimated to account for at least 63% of all abortions. Two medical professionals testified at the hearing, a partisan event with Senators praising and prompting the witness who was favorable to their positions, while insulting and attacking the witness that disagreed with them. Dr. Monique Wubbenhorst, a board-certified OB-GYN with more than 30 years' experience in patient care, teaching and research, testified on the dangers of chemical abortion drugs. Dr. Nisha Verma, a board-certified OB-GYN with a BA in Biology & Anthropology and less than ten years' experience, defended the use of chemical abortion drugs. Senator Moody interrupted her testimony to ask her if men could get pregnant. Verma responded that she was unsure where the line of questioning was headed and noting she treats patients with a “range of identities.” Ok, being a “man” is not an “identity,” it is a biological definition based on the individual having one X chromosome and one Y chromosome, as opposed to being a “biological woman” with two X chromosomes. Having a BA in Biology & Anthropology, Verma knows the scientific progression of human beings as well as their genetic makeup, but her political ideology prevented her from answering the question scientifically and honestly. Verma answered based on gender “identities” rather than “biological certainty.” ^{7,8}

Senator Hawley interjected, “Well, the goal [of the question] is the truth. Can men get pregnant? ... The goal is to establish a biological reality,” Hawley added, continuing to push for a direct answer. “I just want to know, based on the science, can men get pregnant? That’s a yes or no question. It really is...” Verma argued that the question was “political in nature” and said she preferred to have a “broader conversation rather than respond in a binary way.” Verma’s answer was “political” in nature as well.

Progressive gender identity supporters insist that a man can become pregnant. “yes, it’s possible for men to become pregnant and give birth to children of their own. In fact, it’s probably a lot more common than you would think,” insists Healthline’s K.C. Clements, a queer, non-binary/trans writer and, “educator.”⁹ Clements does not have a medical degree. Instead, she holds an M.A. in Gender Politics from New York University, regarded as one of the most progressive universities in New York State, due to their gender studies program. “Any individual with a uterus and ovaries can get pregnant. If you don’t have a uterus, emerging technologies like uterus transplants may make it possible for you to get pregnant in the future.” With this declaration, Clements admits that a biological male cannot become pregnant naturally, without surgical intervention. It’s all in semantics and how you frame the conversation for progressives.

Note: While successful uterus transplants have been done in biological women, the procedure is only theoretically possible with a biological man and would involve multiple surgeries, a dramatic physical transformation of the male abdomen and pelvis and lifelong use of hormones and physical monitoring.

“Your reproductive organs and hormones may change what pregnancy looks like, but your gender isn’t – and shouldn’t be – considered a limiting factor.”

Comprehensive reviews of medical literature show fewer than 100 verifiable cases where someone that identified as male carried a pregnancy.¹⁰ Tracy LaGondino is a biological female who “came out” as Thomas Beatie, a transgender male in 1997. Before her coming out, LaGondino was a model and Miss Hawaii Teen USA pageant finalist. LaGondino underwent “top surgery,” a more pleasant way to describe a double mastectomy, but never had a hysterectomy to remove her uterus, her cervix, her ovaries and fallopian tubes. Even though she identified as a man, LaGondino couldn’t bring herself to totally erase the last proof of the biological sex she was born with and have an artificial penis surgically created. It is true that Beatie carried three pregnancies after undergoing artificial insemination (he was married to another woman). But to do so, Beatie ceased taking testosterone for several months to restore the ovarian function and menstrual cycles of her biological female body. Tracy did not go back on testosterone after the birth of her first child, choosing to remain female in order to give birth to another baby. Tracy’s photo appeared in a national gay advocacy magazine, showing her bearded face and pregnant belly. Tracy was even interviewed by Barbara Walters, where she revealed she was pregnant and expecting her second child.¹¹ Tracy and Walters went to great lengths during the interview to portray her marriage to her wife and self-insemination as “normal.” Although Tracy later had “lower surgery,” she could not become pregnant as a transgender man; she could only become pregnant by reverting to the biological female she was and always will be.

I know I'm a white, cisgender male, but nothing about that situation strikes me as being "normal." I also admit to intentionally "misgendering" Tracy/Thomas, a violation of anti-discrimination and human rights laws in several Blue, progressive states as well as Canada and the European Union. Dr. Sabra Katz-Wise of the Harvard Medical School claims "When people are misgendered daily... it becomes a burden that can negatively impact their mental health and ability to function in the world."¹² I think that Tracy/Thomas functions just fine in the world given all the publicity she/he has received. Beatie, a global LGBTQ advocate and celebrity, has been interviewed by Barbara Walters and Oprah Winfrey, is an author, public speaker and an entrepreneur. There is even a 10-foot marble statue of a pregnant Tracy/Thomas created by a London sculptor. Tracy/Thomas created a global brand, using his political/celebrity status to build a net worth estimated between $1 and $5 million.¹³

Dr. Sabra Katz-Wise co-directs the Harvard Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity and Expressions Health Equity Research Collaborative and is an assistant professor in adolescent/young adult medicine at Boston Children's Hospital. The same Boston Children's Hospital that was the subject of a lawsuit over "reckless" reduction of care assessment of children seeking gender-affirming care at the hospital. Prior to 2018, the hospital had a policy of "allowing" 20 hours of therapy and interviews with patients before making recommendations on the type of treatment they should undergo. In 2018, the hospital cut the therapy and interview time to 10 hours and cut it again to just 2 hours before advising adolescent and preadolescent children on life altering treatments.¹⁴

This is the same Boston Children's Hospital was sued in 2025 for using fraudulent billing codes to ensure minors receive insurance coverage for puberty blockers. The program that Dr. Sabra Katz-Wise is associated with, made initial diagnosis of hundreds of adolescent children with central precocious puberty (CPP) as young as age ten, the time when most children are just beginning to go through puberty. Let that sink in for a moment... Medical professionals make snap diagnoses after two, 1 hour evaluations, prescribe puberty blockers to preadolescent children to stop development of their biological sexual development, beginning the initial steps of gender transitioning. Prior to 2019, Boston Children's Hospital diagnosed CPP in exactly zero ten year old children. In 2020, after reducing the interview process to 2 hours, medical professionals diagnosed 33 ten year old children with CPP. In 2021, 33 ten year olds were diagnosed with CPP and in 2022, 94 ten year olds were diagnosed with CPP.¹⁵

Dr. Nisha Verma was conflicted during her Senate testimony. On the one hand, she knew the scientific truth; that a biological male, with intact genitalia, cannot become pregnant. On the other hand, the religion of gender-ideology that she worships, tells her that biological men can become pregnant. But this religion fails to qualify the biological and chemical changes that must happen first for this to occur. It cannot occur naturally. It is an artificial construct created by the gender revolution and promoted by the useful idiots who support it. Like Barbara Walters.
