Did Not Send Letter

He said he did not send the surrender offer or any other letters, purportedly sent by the killer, that have mystified police.

If Voorhees is innocene, police hoped that the real slayer still would keep the promised rendezvous today despite another note, purportedly from him, which set forth terms of surrender.

"I will give up in Dahlia killing if I get ten years. Don't try to find me," said the note made up of letters and words clipped from newspaper headlines of the crime.

A few black hairs were stuck in the celiulose tape which fastened the letters to the paper.
