

THRILLIST

Everything You Need to Do in Boston This Weekend

By MEAGHAN AGNEW

Does it get any better than this? The temps are temperate, your boss is gone for the next two weeks, and we're in the middle of Shark Week. Never mind that there's nary a rain cloud on your weather app. Time for outdoor frolicking, be it an alfresco seafood fest, a raucous lawn party, or an open-air viewing of the greatest shark movie of all time (sorry, Shark Week). Here is everything you must do in Boston this weekend.

Open wide for an alfresco Jaws screening

Friday, August 2

The Anchor

Loyalists know the drill: crushable Narragansetts, Quint as spirit animal, and Jaws as a reminder that they don't make summer thrillers like they used to. Bonus? Spending a full evening in Charlestown's newest beer garden.

Cost: Free admission (free beers, not so much).
