

Roominations

Danielle Slutzky couldn't have picked a more perfect name for her company—Flair Design House. Take a look at her own 4,400-square-foot home in Newport Beach, which she's nicknamed Horse & Hound, and you'll see why. It was during the design, construction and furnishing of this oh-so wonderfully curated home that she discovered her knack for sourcing unique and one-of-a-kind items—everything from accessories and artwork to textiles and furniture—that pair sublimely with an existing collection of personal finds. The result is a home that sings with personality, style and livability. "I have a creative mind that knows no limits—both a blessing and a curse, as super-creative applications within my design plans are all I think about," says Slutzky. Come, follow along as we take a tour of the spaces she created for her family of five, plus three fur babies.

"Being a horse person for 40-plus years, I knew that the modern farmhouse/barn house was, without a doubt, going to be the architectural style of our home, no question!"

"We kept to the original floor plan, as it was ideal and it really worked for the movement of our family. The goals were to build a unique, one-of-a-kind, special family home that we could both live comfortably in—not treat it like a museum masterpiece—and entertain guests in. I'm so happy to say that it achieves both perfectly!"

The dining room/bar, like the kitchen, is a prime gathering spot in our home. We named our bar ZeBAR, after the fabulous Scalamandré Zebra print wallpaper that is featured behind it. I had been holding on to this classic wallpaper print for many years, knowing that it would work itself into one of my personal projects."
