The Ground Really Moved For One Woman During The Second Movement Of The LA Philharmonic’s Performance Of Tchaikovsky’s 5th Symphony — When She Experienced A “Loud And Full Body Orgasm.”

Several Concertgoers Described The Woman’s Climactic Moment Friday From The Balcony At The Packed Walt Disney Concert Hall.

“Everyone Kind Of Turned To See What Was Happening,” Molly Grant, Who Was Sitting Near The Overjoyed Woman, Told The Los Angeles Times On Sunday.

“I Saw The Girl After It Happened, And I Assume That She... Had An Orgasm Because She Was Heavily Breathing, And Her Partner Was Smiling And Looking At Her — Like In An Effort Not To Shame Her,” She Said.

“It Was Quite Beautiful,” Grant Added.

An Audio Clip Purporting To Capture The Woman’s Moment Of Ecstasy Has Gone Viral.

British Composer Magnus Fiennes, Brother Of Actor Ralph Fiennes, Also Was In Attendance. “A Woman In The Audience Had A Loud And Full Body Orgasm During The 5th’s Second Movement... Band Politely Played On,” He Said On Twitter.

However, Some Social Media Users Expressed Their Doubts About The Incident, With One Who Was Present Suggesting That The Woman Had A Medical Emergency. [Ed. Note: One Would Think The Woman In Question Could Authoritatively Resolve That Question. Presumably She Knows What She Experienced — Orgasm, Heart Attack Or Whatever-The-Pfuck - Jesus!]

Fiennes Insisted “It Absolutely Happened,” Writing That He “Ran All The Possible Scenarios.”

“Was In Close Proximity And No Less Than 8 Other Friends Coincidentally Attending — All Had Reached A Similar Conclusion. She Remained For The Rest Of The Show, Her Demeanor Was In Evidence. My Corroborated Take Is Merely Is Merely An Observation. Respect Maintained,” He Said.

Classical Pianist Sharon Su Added In A Tweet That She “Checked With Someone Who Works At The LA Phil And They Confirmed” That The Incident Was Real And That The Orchestra Did Not Stop Playing During Tchaikovsky’s 5th.

The LA Times Reported That It’s Sources And The Audio Clip Corroborated The Accounts That The Orchestra Did Not Miss A Beat During The Explosive Moment.

It Noted That The Philharmonic’s Online Program Notes Included The Following Description Of The Second Movement.

“The ... Luscious Main Theme Was Adapted For a Popular Love Song; Tchaikovsky’s Skillful Orchestration, However, Lifts The Mood From Sentimentality To High Romanticism. The Movement’s Principal Melody Is Presented In A Memorable Solo By The Horn, Followed By Other Appealing Woodwind Solos.”

Music Agent Lukas Burton Told The LA Times That The Woman’s Load Moan Was “Wonderfully Timed” To A “Romantic Timed” To A “Romantic Swell” During The Performance.

“One Can’t Know What Exactly Happened, But It Seemed Very Clear From The Sound That It Was An Expression Of Pure Physical Joy,” Burton Told The Paper.

“A Sort Of Classical Music Equivalent Of That Scene I A Movie Where Someone Is Talking Loudly In A Party Or A Nightclub, And The Record Suddenly Stops And They Something That Everyone Hears,” He Said.

Burton Added That The Classic Expression Of Joy Was “Rather Wonderful and Refreshing.”

He Said There Was “A Sort Of Gasp In The Audience” But That “Everyone Felt That Was A Rather Lovely Expression Of Somebody Who Was So Transported By The Music That It Had Some Kind Of Effect On Them.

The Times Said It Has Not Been Able To Identify The Woman And That The Philharmonic Did Not Immediately Respond To It’s Request For Comment.

Classical Music Scholars Have Noted That The Melody Of John Denver’s “Annie’s Song” — Which Included The Lyrics, “You Fill Up My Senses / Come Fill Me Again’ — Is The Horn Solo From The Second Movement Of Tchiakovsky’s 5th Symphony.

Why The LA Philharmonic ‘Full-Body Orgasm’ Could Been The Real Deal

By Natalie O’Neill nypost.com

It Was Likely A Big “O” — Not An “Oh, No!”

Naysayers Who Blamed A “Medical Emergency” For A Woman’s Load Spontaneous Orgasm At The LA Philharmonic Concert Are Singing The Wrong Tune, According To Officials.

There Were No Health Emergency Calls About A Woman In The Area Of The Performance At Walt Disney Concert Hall After The Show’s 8 PM Starting Time Friday, Los Angeles Fire Department Spokesman Nicholas Prange Told The Post Thursday.

The Department Handles All Reports Of Medical Emergencies In The City And Would Have Been Contacted If The Lady In Question Was Having One, He Said.

The Only Possible Health Crises Nearby Centered On A 24-Year-Old Male Suffering From Abdominal In A Parking Lot Across From The Concert Venue At 9:22 PM, According To Prange, Who Said There Was No Indication He Attended The Show.

Over The Weekend, A Female Concert-Goer Apparently Had A Noisy “Full Body Orgasm” During LA Phil’s Performance Of Tchaikovsky’s 5th Symphony — Though The Band Continued Play Without Missing A Beat, Witnesses Told The LA Times.

But Other People At The Performance Claimed Her Caught-On-Tape Outburst Sounded Less Like A Steamy Climax Than A Cry For Help.

“I Was There... The Poor Woman Had A Breakdown Of Some Sort,” Tweeted Composer Rodrigo Ruiz. “We Were All Worried It Was A Medical Emergency.”

The [LA] Times Got It Wrong, It Seems,” Another Observer Wrote, As Speculation Swirled Online.

But If The Mystery Woman Was In Fact Screaming In Pain Or Had A Mental Health Crisis, The City’s EMS Services Never Heard A Thing About It, Prange Said.

Told About Reports That She May Have Simply Been Crying Out In Ecstasy, Prange Replied, “Good For Her.”

The LA Phil And Ruiz Didn’t Return The Post’s Request For Comment Thursday.

I Had A Full-Body Orgasm Like The LA Philharmonic Woman — This Is What It Feels Like

By Andrew Court nypost.com

2 May 2023 (@ 1656 Hrs EDT)

They Shall Overcome.

A Regular Old Orgasm Just Doesn’t Cut It For Growing Number Of People Who Say They’ve Taught Their Bodies To Experience A More Powerful Kind Of Climax.

The Pleasure-Seekers Say They Have “Full-Body Orgasms,” Described By Experts As “Especially Intense Orgasms That Feel Like They Are In Every Part Of Your Body.”

The Climaxes Cause Abs To Tighten, Legs To Tingle And Fingers To Go Numb, According To Advocates, Who Also Say They Can Be Spiritual, Mind-Altering Experiences.

The Phenomenon Was Thrust Into The Headlines This Week After A Female Concertgoer Purportedly Experienced A “Loud Full-Body Orgasm” During The Los Angeles Philharmonic’s Performance Of Tchaikovsky’s “Symphony No. 5.”

However, It Still Seems The Erotic Attendee Is In Good *Come*Pany, With Many Saying They’ve Also Experienced One Of The Extremely Intense Episodes.

Dr Laurie Watson, A North Carolina Sex Therapist, Told The Post On Tuesday That She Frequently Experiences The Toe-Curling Natural Phenomenon. “A Full-Bodied Orgasm Requires Surrender,” Watson Declared, Saying Time And Teasing Are Important Factors If You’re Playing With A Partner.

Describing Her Full-Body Orgasms On A Recent Episode Of Her Podcast Of Her Podcast “Foreplay Radio: Couples & Sex Therapy,” Watson Elaborated: “I Grew Up Going To Disneyland ... It’s Like Being On Mad Hatter Ride In Your Vulva. It’s Like Your Whole Vulva Is Exploding.”

“I Grew Up Going To Disneyland ... It’s Like Being On The Mad Hatter Ride In Your Vulva. It’s Like Your Whole Vulva Is Exploding.”

The Sexpert Said The Sensation Then Expands Down Into Her Anus.

“It’s This Ticklish Feeling That Is Really Great,” She Described. “Then, It Really Gets Expansive. It’s This Balloon Of Excitement That Rises From The Top Of Your Pelvis Bone To The Top Of Your Diaphragm. Then, It Just Shatters Through The Top Of My Head ... At That Point, My Body And My Soul Merge. It’s Like I’m In My Body And Out Of My Body.”

Watson She’s Been Able To Experience Full-Body Orgasms Even Though She’s In Her 60s. [Ed. Note: Holy Effing Shit!!!!!!!!!!
GetOuttaHere!!!]

“As I’ve Aged, I’ve Learned How To Sink Into The Moment And My Own Orgasms Are Markedly More Powerful Even As My Hormones Have Diminished,” The Doctor Said — Who Also Operates A Service Named Counseling Near Me — Dished.

Sharing Her Techniques, She Told The Post: “Teasing A Partner And Delaying Orgasm While On The Brink Is A Primary Way To Build A Great Orgasmic Platform. Physiologically, This Means Loads Of Stop-Start Stimulation To Reach Full Vasocongestion Or Swelling. Mentally, It Means Making Your Partner Crave Release So Hard That It Becomes Their Sole Focus.”

“The Person Orgasming Has To Let Go,” Watson Added. Particularly, They Have To Release Their Pelvic Pelvic Floor So That The Orgasm Spreads Upward From The Root [Penis Or Clitoris] Into The Pelvis, Through The Belly And Into The Chest And The Limbs.

However, It’s Not Only Qualified Sex Therapists Who Are Teaching Others How To Have More Explosive Os. On TikTok, Climaxing Content Creators Are Offering Their Own Instructions.

The Term “Full-Body Orgasm” Has Garnered More Than Half A Billion Views On The App, When Sneaky Coded Hashtags Such As “Full Body Orgs” And “Full Body Orgms” Are Taken Into Account.

Nutritionist @ Dungubook Has Clocked Up Tens Of Thousands Of Views Teaching Men How To Have One Of The Climaxes.

Like Watson, He Says It's All About Teasing And Timing.

In One Video, The British Content Creator Claimed “Edging,” Or Stopping Stimulation Just Before Ejaculation, Helps Achieve A Full-Body Orgasm, As Well As Kegel Exercises, Which Involve Tightening And Holding The Pelvic Floor Muscles.

Meanwhile, Other TikTokers Say Full-Body Orgasms Are More Spiritual Than Sexual.

Content Creator Leán Bakker Stated In A Recent Video: It Is Some Much More Than Sex. It Is Realization Of The Pleasure Force Inside Yourself And You Are Able To Feel God Inside Your Body.”

Meanwhile, Life Coach Lisa May Francisco Recently Went Viral Describing How She Achieved Her First “Cosmic Full Body Orgasm” Without Touching Her Nether Regions.

Francisco Explained That She Experienced The Sensation During A Breath Work Class, In Which She “Worked Through Her Chakras.

“I Felt This Rush Of Pleasure Pulsating Through My Whole Through My Whole Body At A Cellular Level,” Francisco Told The Post In An Interview On Tuesday.

There Was No Sexual Component,” She Added. “It Was Just This Divine Connection And Oneness With Myself And The Life Force Energy That Is Within Every Living Being On This Planet. I Felt My Whole Body Tingling Especially My Yoni [Genital] Area.”

While The Full-Body Orgasm Wasn't Sexual, Francisco — Who Works As A “Self-Love Coach, Inner Child Guide And EFT [Emotional Freedom Technique] Practitioner” — Said She Could Transfer Some Of The Techniques Into To the Berdoom.

“If You're Looking To Achieve A Full-Body Orgasm, Focus On The Practices That Help Cultivate Self-Awareness, Clear Out Any Emotions To Help You Get Into Your Body, And Start A Self-Pleasure Practice,” She Advised.

“By Being Your Own Devine Lover, You Start To Prep Yourself For This Kind Of Orgasm Because It's a Reflection Of How Much Love You Have For Yourself.

Why So Many Women Are Still Faking Orgasms

By Jana Hocking news.com.au
27 April 2023 (@ 1221 Hours)

Men, I Have Some Rather Grim Sexual News For You.

You're Not Going To Like It But Stick With Me Because I'm About To Reveal The Problem And The Solution For You.

It Would Appear From My Very Thorough Research That You Are Doing Sex Completely Wrong.

You See, Each Monday Night On My Instagram I Ask My Followers To Send Me A Saucy Secret.

I Share Them Anonymously With A Sexy Picture I Think Matches The Story.

Safe To Say, They Never Disappoint.

Followers Share What Kind Of Kinks They Are Into, Stories Of Illicit Affairs, Daliances With People Of Various Sexual Preferences,
And Numerous Other Saucy Tales.

One Common Theme I'm Finding Among The Women Is That Many Of Them Fake Orgasms — And I Know (And Understand Why.
You See, Men Are Doing It All Wrong.

Watch Any Sex Scene In And You Would Think A Woman Has An Orgasm As Soon As A Man Inserts His Old Fella. [Ed. Note:
Now That's A Good One! Arf! Arf! Arf!

Yep, According To Most Movies, All A Man Must Do Is Push A Woman Up Against A Wall, Or Take The Standard Missionary Position, And Were Moaning In Delight Within Seconds.

The Issue Is, That's Not How It Works In Real Life.

And Our G-Spot Is Not Found That Quickly.

First, Let's Start With Foreplay.

For Insertion Alone, We Need A Bit Of A Warm-Up.

Don't Just Strip Us Down And Think We're Good To Go.

Take It Slow, Make It Fun.

Treat Our Bodies Like An Untamed Jungle That Needs To Be Explored From Top To Bottom.

Use Your Eyes And Ears To See What Gets Us Going.

In Fact, Perhaps Start Literally With Our Ears.

I Read A Meme The Other Day That Said "Saying 'Good Girl' Triggers Something Absolutely Barbaric In My Brain" And To That, I Say, Hear, Hear, Sista!"

Seriously, Start By Turning Us On With Words — It Shows Confidence And Engagement.

Then — And This Is The Most Important Part — Realize That Our G-Spot Is Not Necessarily Located On The Inside.

Talking To A Group Of Friends Recently, We Agreed That Our Orgasms Very Rarely Comes From Plain 'Ol Penetration.

It Usually Comes From A Very Specific Spot.

Now Grab A Pen, Fellas, Because You May Want To Write This Down: It Starts With A "C" And Ends With A "T. " [Ed. Note: Oh, The Cosmos Will Surely Make Me Pay For This... So Does The Word 'CUNT.' Clit/Cunt, Whatever The Pfuck.

Yes, My Friends, It Is Called The Clitoris, And You Really Want To Give It Lots Of Attention.

And I'm Not Just Saying This Based On My Small Tally Of Girlfriends Who Agreed.

There's An Study That Proves That Women Require Clitoral Stimulation To Have An Orgasm.

The Center For Sexual Health Promotion At Indiana University Assessed Data From 1,055 Women Ages 18 To 94 Who Answered A Detailed Online Survey About Their Sex Lives Which Found That The Majority Of Women Reported That They Often Don't Reach Orgasm Through Intercourse Alone.

This Contradicts The Stereotype That Intercourse That Intercourse Is The Be-All And End-All Of Sexual Activity.

It Suggests That Couples Should Explore The Whole Range The Whole Range Of Pleasurable Options For Achieving Climax.

For Example, Oral Stimulation, Or The Use Of Pleasure Tools.

Now, It Makes Sense Why The Sex Toy Industry Is Making Big Bucks Off A New-Ish Type Of Vibrator That Is Designed Specifically For The Clitoral Area.

I've Been Sent Two In The Past Month From Lovely Brands And I'm Certainly Not Sad About It.

One Thing We Women Must Admit, Though, Is That We Are Partly To Blame For This Misguided Belief That Women Have Orgasms From Jackhammering.

To Put It Simply, We Lie.

In Fact, We Tend To Lie A Lot.

That Earth-Shattering Orgasm You Think You Just Gave Us ... Well, Give The Girl An Oscar Because She Was Faking It.

Rather Impressively So.

No Wonder You Blokes Think Penetration Is A Fast Track To An Orgasm.

We Often Make You Think That's The Case.

The Reality Is We Got Bored And Decided To Wrap Things Up.

So, Let's Clear This Up Once And For All.

Men, Start Paying Attention To Our Clitoral Area — And If You Don't Know Where That Is Located, Do A Quick Google Search.

It Will Blow Your Mind.

And Women, Stop Faking Orgasms.

Instead, Perhaps Nudge Your Man In The Right Direction And Only Moan When You Mean It. [Ed. Note: Methinks That's The Best Advice In The Entire Piece. Cheers, Ms Hocking! Well Done, Luv :)]

Sorted.

Now Go And Enjoy A Fulfilling (And Honest) Sex Life.

A 'Full Body Orgasm' At The LA Phil?

Witnesses Offer Conflicting Accounts. Hear What Happened During Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5 From Other Concertgoers

By Christi Carras Los Angeles Times
30 April 2023 (@ 1635 Hrs PDT)

Molly Grant Was Enjoying The Los Angeles Philharmonic's Performance Of Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony On Friday At The Walt Disney Concert Hall When She Heard What She Described As A "Scream/Moan" Erupt From The Balcony.

"Everyone Kind Of Turned To See What Was Happening," Grant, Who Was Seated Near The Person Who Allegedly Made The Noise, Told The Times On Sunday In A Phone Interview."

"I Saw The Girl After It Happened, And I Assume That She ... Had An Orgasm Because She Was Heavily Breathing, And Her Partner Was Smiling And Looking At Her — Like In An Effort To Not Shame Her," Said Grant, Who Works For A Jewelry Company And Lives In Los Feliz. "It Was Quite Beautiful."

Multiple People Who Attended The LA Phil Concert On Friday Reported Hearing A Woman Making A Moaning Noise During The Symphony's Second Movement.

One Attendee, Composer And Music Producer Magnus Fiennes, Described The Sound On Twitter As That Of A Person Having "A Loud And Full Body Orgasm."

An Alleged Audio Recording Of The Moment — Where Someone Can Be Heard Crying Out During A Quiet Beat In The Music — Was Making The Rounds On Social Media.

Attendees Who Spoke To The Times Said That The Clip Was Similar To What They'd Heard.

“[F]riends Who Went To The LA Philharmonic Last Night Are Reporting That In The Middle Of The Show Some Lady Had A SCREAMING Orgasm, To The Point Where The Whole Orchestra Stopped Playing,” Tweeted Journalist Jocelyn Silver. “Some People Really Know How To Live ...”

However, People In Attendance Said That The Musicians Played Through The Disturbance Without Stopping. Classical Pianist Sharon Su Tweeted That She “ Checked With Someone Who Works At The Phil And They Confirmed” That The Orchestra Continued Playing Through The Commotion.

The Times Has Since Confirmed That The Orchestra Kept Performing And That There Were No Further Disruptions.

It Is Still Unclear What Exactly Occurred In The Audience. The Times Has Contacted The LA Phil For Comment But Has Not Been Able To Identify Or Contact The Person Who Made The Sound.

Other Audience Members Disputed The Orgasm Theory, Offering That The Woman Could Have Made The Noise While Waking After Having Fallen Asleep. Some Worried That It Could Have Been Related To A Medical Condition Or Emergency.

One Attendee Who Was Seated In The Row Directly Behind The Person Who Made The Noise Said It Appeared As If The Woman Was Waking Up From A Sleep Attack When She Made The Sound.

“Pretty Quickly, She Sort Of Fell Onto Her Partner’s Shoulders, And Then Onto His Lap. And Then Her Body Went Limp,” Recalled The Audience Member, Who Requested Anonymity To Discuss The Incident. “Maybe Like Five Seconds Later, She Kind Of Awoke, And That’s When She Let Out A Scream.

The Audience Member Who Was Seated In The Row Behind The Person Said She Had Previously Witnessed A Person With Narcolepsy Experience A Sleep Attack, And What She Saw At The LA Phil Seemed Similar.

After The Woman Made The Noise, Her Partner And Another Woman Seated Next To Her Asked If She Was OK, And She Replied That She Was, According To The Audience Member, Who Reported Overhearing The Exchange.

“I Know Someone Else Mentioned She Was Smiling, But I’m Pretty Sure She Was Just Really Embarrassed Because Other People Were Looking At Her, The Audience Member Told The Times.

Another Concertgoer Emailed The Times To Say He Heard The Noise But Did Not Think It Was A Sound Of Ecstasy.

Friday's Program, Led By Conductor slim Cham, Also Included A Performance Of Thomas Adés' "Concentric Paths" Violin Concerto.

The LA Phil's Online Program Notes Include This Description Of The Second Of Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5:

"The ... Luscious Main Theme Was Adapted For A Popular Love Song; Tchaikovsky's Skillful Orchestration, However, Lifts The Mood From Sentimentality To High Romanticism. The Movement's Principal Melody Is Presented In A Memorable Solo By The Horn, Followed By Other Appealing Woodwind Solos."

Silver Lake Resident And Music Agent Lukas Burton Said The Sound From The Audience Member Was "Wonderfully Timed" To A "Romantic Swell" In The Symphony.

"One Can't Know Exactly What Happened, But It Seemed Very Clear From The Sound That It Was An Actual Expression Of Pure Physical Joy," Burton Said. "A Sort Of Classical-Music Equivalent Of That Scene In A Movie Where Someone Is Talking Loudly In A Party Or A Nightclub, And Then The Record Suddenly Stops And They Say Something That Everyone Hears."

While The Outburst Was Clearly An Unusual And Surprising Moment For A Classical Musical Concert, Burton Described It As "Rather Wonderful And Refreshing."

"There Was A Sort Of Gasp In The Audience," Burton Said. But I Think Everyone Felt That Was A Rather Lovely Expression Of Somebody Who Was So Transported By The Music That It Had Some Kind Of Effect On Them Physically Or, Dare I Say, Even Sexually."

[Ed. Note: I've No Shame In Admitting That Until Yesterday I'd Never Heard Of An FBO. I Reckon That Me And My 5.715 cm Of Flexible Liberal Lukewarm Cock Ought Get Out The House More Often — Why, Good Golly Miss Molly! That Said, If The Gestation Powers-That-Be Had Thought To Ask My Gender Preference, Why I Most Certainly Would Have Selected F-E-M-A-L-E. Now, All That Said I'm Content Walkin' 'Round As A Hetero Dude. No Gender Angst Or Confusion Here. What? Who The Pfuck Are You? Meatball Ron, Is That You? Yeah, It Is. I Just Want To Say That It's Good That It's Good That You Know That Your A Man's Man. Okaaaay, Meatball. Could You Do Me A Favor? Probably Not. Could You Just Drop The Meatball Thing? Oh, Hell No! Now That I Know About These FBOs, Why I'm Just Jealous As All Get Out. Full Body Orgasms — Who The Hell Knew?!
