

Rocky Adkins, a native West Virginian, serves as the County Administrator for Logan County as well as the Executive Director of the Logan County Development Authority (LCDA).

Education: University of Kentucky Gatton College of Business and Economics, Institute for Economic Development; University of Oklahoma Economic Development Institute; and West Virginia University Community Development Institute.

Rocky started his career in 1973, working for a family-owned construction company. In 1990, joined the management team at a local lumber home center. In 2002, was named to his current position as Executive Director of the LCDA. In 2004, Rocky became the County Administrator for Logan County.

Rocky also serves on the Guyan Conservation District, West Virginia State Conservation Committee, Logan County Airport Authority, Logan County Solid Waste Authority, Hatfield-McCoy Trail Authority, Logan County Chamber of Commerce, Chief Logan Recreational Center, Inc., Chief Logan Recreational Center Foundation and on the Advisory Committee at Christ Temple Church to help create long-term addiction recovery facilities in Huntington, West Virginia.