

CORVELVA Papers

Beyond the mainstream censorship

All the insights and references on:

corvelva.it/corvelva-papers/

Monthly editorial made by

Special Pandemic - 2020

This project was born in December 2019 in conjunction with the increase in the “soft censorship” applied by the various social and search engines. Our answer is clear: nobody can censor us!

The business of terror

We are now accustomed to the terminology of contagion:

SARS, swine and avian flu, but also measles and tetanus, why not. Foot-and-mouth disease and mad cow disease and distemper; zika, malaria and plague. Those served to domesticate the plebs; now the plebs must be controlled.

Everything started suddenly, as in the best video games or apocalyptic movies. The images of the affected areas that fill the news: papers fluttering in the air, figures in the background in white or yellow suits for biological risk, overpopulated cities with now deserted streets, respiratory creaks and lanes with crowded people, preventive measures and hasty commuters with masks ... but this is not a movie: this is the biggest general test of population control.

The keywords today are few, but already well-carved in people's minds: Wuhan, Coronavirus and Pandemic. It takes very little to start this movie, in the end the set has been well set up in the last 3 years with the issue of measles, the lies and ignorance of the politicians have created the ideal terrain and the media alarmism has done the rest, but this time, something went wrong: the frame is too flashy and people are asking too many questions.

Let's come to what we know of the situation as at today, end of January 2020, and shake off all those irrelevant details built by the director. Let's try to rattle off only the news that we are sure of, and let's try to "get into" the movie and see the behind the scenes of this coronavirus pandemic, keeping in mind that things are evolving.

The first ascertained case dates 1st December 2019; initially it was just a strange viral pneumonia with no etiology that appeared around the fish market in Huanan, located in the sprawling city of Wuhan, central China. In a short time, in early January, the infectious agent, a coronavirus classified as 2019-nCoV, had been identified.

Fish, snakes, bats and mammals were the first suspects of the virus zoonosis and the 2019-nCoV virus protein code analysis, performed by a team of researchers from the University of Beijing, found that it was a recombination of the bat coronavirus with an unknown coronavirus; the hypothesis that the best incubation "tank" was a snake, cobra in our case, at least until researchers Ewen Callaway and David Cyrnoski categorically denied this possibility, with a well-condensed detailed article, published in the scientific journal Nature.

From this moment on, chaos reigned supreme in information and, between denials and leaks, we had to admit that certainties cannot be found, but on the contrary, coincidences abound.

On February 26, 2017 the scientific journal Nature published an article which highlighted the concern of a part of the scientific community about the opening of a BSL-4 safety level laboratory, the first in China, precisely in Wuhan: the Immunology and Metabolism of the Medical Research Institute. Concern was also coming by the fact that the SARS virus had already escaped several times from Beijing's high level containment plants and, above all, the level of freedom and openness of the Chinese government did not allow us to be sure that these laboratories had no dual purpose, namely research and development of biological weapons.

Still talking about coincidences, we have several sources that, in the past few days, have pointed the finger at the eventuality that the coronavirus was a military bacteriological weapon, escaped from the Wuhan laboratory. Paolo Liguori, a well-known Italian journalist, recently came out during a newscast with statements [that went precisely in this direction.

Paul Martin, a former foreign correspondent now living in Hong Kong, in an interview with British MEP Nigel Farage, accused Hong Kong governor Carrie Lam of lying about the real Chinese situation. Dany Shoham, biologist and former Israeli military intelligence officer, expert on bacteriological weapons in the Middle East and Asia, in an interview with the Washington Times spoke of the existence of a laboratory in Wuhan - considered the outbreak of contagion - where the Chinese government would be carrying out a secret chemical weapons development program.

We stop here in citing the sources that open up to this scenario - already defined as conspiracy by the same mainstream media that launched it, remembering however that the concerns published in del Corvelva Staff e J.B.

The business of terror

2017 on Nature by the molecular biologist of Rutgers University of Piscataway, Richard Ebricht, have become prophetic, since when the Chinese Communist Party itself refused to allow a team of experts from the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and the World Health Organization to intervene in support of the Chinese pandemic.

To tell the truth, from our point of view, the fact that the experts of the World Health Organization are not brought to intervene in a (supposed) pandemic is almost reassuring - and our memory goes to the great health emergencies sold as pandemics such as mad cow disease, SARS, swine and avian flu. Planetary emergency plans, total war against this or that virus that could decimate the population, with all the economic consequences that this entails: millions of vaccine doses - purchased with the money of the States - then thrown away, extreme security systems, tight controls where there would be no need, billions of euros or dollars gone up in smoke, generalized psychosis. These were the past emergencies. And in the end, real pandemics have not happened yet.

There would be books to write about WHO, but we just want to mention the 2010 survey of the British Medical Journal and the Bureau of Investigative Journalism, where it was clear that the main scientists who advised the World Health Organization to plan a pandemic influenza, had done rewarded work for pharmaceutical companies, which were making money from the same guidelines they prepared. These conflicts of interest have never been publicly disclosed by the WHO, and the same archived the investigations into its management of the A/ H1N1 pandemic as "conspiracy theories" (it is a pure coincidence that it is equally "conspiracy" to ask doubts about the genesis of the coronavirus in Wuhan and the real situation in China).

In describing the current situation we feel a bit like hybrids, mythological figures halfway between the journalists who applauded Colin Powell while waving the bottle of fake anthrax, and the Resident Evil players grappling with the Umbrella Corps, but this is how we feel if we go back a little, to that October 18, 2019, the day when Event 201 was held at the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security. The big guys of the World Economic Forum and the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation cooperated that day, ready to host a simulation of a global pandemic.

This pandemic exercise of the highest level had the theoretical purpose of managing and reducing the large-scale economic and social consequences of a possible viral epidemic, and it is always and only a mere coincidence that the virus used for the simulation was precisely a coronavirus, with lots of nice merchandising given by small plush in the shape of a coronavirus.

It should be remembered, but it is always a mere coincidence, that in November 2013 the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation financed the British Pirbright Institute with 189,000 euros. In July 2015, the Pirbright Institute filed the patent for attenuated coronaviruses to be used as a vaccine to prevent lung and respiratory diseases.

On January 24, 2020, from the official Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security website, they had to specify that their scenario "was modeled on an imaginary coronavirus pandemic" and "explicitly stated that it was not a prediction."

"We do not anticipate now that the nCoV-2019 epidemic will kill 65 million people. Although our tabletop exercise included a fake coronavirus."

All this chaos has however created a coalition, supported by the omnipresent Bill Gates, who is funding biotechnology research to develop vaccines against Wuhan's "deadly" coronavirus. We are talking about a $ 7 billion investment in a joint effort with the National Institutes of Health to use its genetic drug development platform in the production of an experimental vaccine. Biotechnology giant Gilead Sciences is also considering re-proposing an experimental drug previously tested against the Ebola virus as a treatment for the Chinese strain.

In conclusion, we know too much about this pandemic. We have so much information about it that, if put together, we realize that it is currently impossible to make predictions. In the worst case scenario, the Chinese military has "played" with SARS and a modified virus has "escaped" and now the great Chinese Communist Party is doing everything - and is highly capable - to hide information; in the best of cases, it is yet another example of fear marketing: an epidemic outbreak in an overpopulated area sold as the eighth plague of Egypt and this, given how it worked perfectly with measles, will probably bring state policy ex-sovereigns to take pejorative measures. Scientocratic states, linked to media fetishes, will soon apply the electronic passport of vaccinations and industries, instead of devoting themselves to antivirals, medicines for sick people, will invest only in the new business of medicines for the healthy: vaccines.

All insights and references on:

corvelva.it/corvelva-papers/