Local Civil War Veterans Honored in Observance of 150th Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg

After success at Chancellorsville, Virginia, General Robert E. Lee confidently marched his forces through the Shenandoah Valley crossing into Pennsylvania on July 1, 1863. The advancing Confederates were confronted at Gettysburg by the Union's Army of the Potomac commanded by General George G. Meade. Fierce fighting continued throughout the next day at various sites surrounding the small farming town. On July 3, Lee ordered an attack at Cemetery Ridge. The assault known as "Pickett's Charge," weakened the Union lines but failed to break through. On July 4, Lee was forced to withdraw his troops and return to Virginia. As we observe the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, it's important to note the local men who volunteered to fight with the Union Forces. The following names are on file at the Nanticoke Historical Society Offices. For the sake of space, we have given a brief note about each, but more information can be obtained on these men as well as family names listed by obtaining an Historical Research Request Form online or at the Historical Society offices.

dispatched into the town to take “candid” photos of possible contestants.

Martin Gronka, principal of Nanticoke High School announced the initial opening of Teen House. Admission was by membership card, available at the door.

October

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Demko of Centre Street, Hanover Section of Nanticoke had a mystery on their hands when they found a letter written by a Pennsylvania cavalryman during the Civil War. In the letter penned by Edward Avery, Co. 2, of the 9th PA Cavalry to his wife, Evaline, he wrote of the hardships of the battlefield and his concern for national politics. The letter was found in the Demko's garage stacked in a box with other old papers. Neither they, nor the parents of Mrs. Demko, who owned the home prior, were not familiar with the Avery's. A call to Kingston street commissioner Henry Avery revealed he was the grandson of the cavalryman. Mr. Avery reported his grandfather, was thrown from a horse and killed shortly after returning home. But could not account for why the Demko's had the letter.

On March 12, 1917, William Jenkins purchased the Leader Store from J.W. Schreiner. In 1956 Jenkins celebrated his 39th year of ownership.

November

Barbara Stachowiak of West Church Street was chosen as “Miss Nanticoke Tanker” at the Tanker Ball held by the 109th Infantry Regiment.

The Nanticoke Businessmen's Association announced the annual “Talk Turkey” Sale. Along with specials offered in stores city-wide, over 40 turkeys were given away and a Thanksgiving dinner valued at over $10 was awarded.

December

Here's a sampling of goods and services offered in 1956. The Leader Store offered black heel nylon hose for 57 cents, Wysocki's Seafood Restaurant on South Market Street advertised an old fashioned chicken dinner with mashed potatoes gravy, cole slaw and sliced tomato for $1. Bavitz Service Station on Broadway Street sold “snow tread tires” for $9.95. Gallie's Fresh and Frozen Seafood Market listed take out platters of shrimp, oysters, or deviled crab for 75 cents.

DID YOU KNOW?

- One Hundred and Seventy-six men from Hanover Township, which included Nanticoke, joined to fight in the Civil War. Twenty-one of these men died in battles or later from wounds obtained in battle.
- The first of fourteen volunteer companies left Luzerne Counties after the fall of Ft. Sumter on April 12, 1861,
- The Conscription Act of 1863 provided a man eligible to escape the draft by paying a $300 fee.
- In order to cover the costs of the Civil War, on August 5, 1861, Congress passed a Revenue Act, which represented the very first income tax. The tax was repealed in 1872 and a flat rate tax was passed in 1894.

Nanticoke Historical Society announces move

With the scheduled demolition of two historical sites, The Nanticoke Jr. High School and the State Theatre, a group of citizens passionate about preserving local history for future generations met in 1996 and formed the Nanticoke Historical Society. In 2008, the Society moved from the manse of the First Presbyterian Church to the East Main Street home built in the early 1800's by John Mill. The last surviving member of the Mill family, Samantha, stipulated in her will that the City of Nanticoke establish a public library on the grounds of the Mill Homestead. The Mill Memorial Library was completed in 1958 and serves the community today.

We are currently in need of people to help with photograph classification, filing, data entry, sorting and updating our current inventory of historical data. Please call us if you are interested. We appreciate any help you can give us in this regard.

Add to our database....

If you have historical photos of Nanticoke and Newport Township, will can scan them into our database and immediately return them within a short period of time.

In the five years since the move, the Society occupied the second floor of the Mill home while the South Valley Chamber of Commerce operated on the first floor. With the addition of new computers, printers and scanners as well as an expanding quantity of archival information and material it has been agreed that the Chamber will move to the second floor while the historical society utilize the first floor for their offices and to greet guests. An expected acquisition of original pieces of furniture previously taken from the home will soon be returned to the premises to be utilized and enjoyed.

There never has been a more exciting time to be a part movement to uncover as much of our history as possible. The Nanticoke Historical Society is leading in that effort. The group has diligently assembled a wealth of information that encompasses the early Indian tribes, local coal mining industry, histories of homes, churches, schools and businesses, newspaper accounts, families and lifestyles, along with an extensive collection of photographs that reflect all of the above. These records have been painstakingly assembled and documented by dedicated volunteers who tirelessly continue their quest to compile a complete history of the people, places and times of the City of Nanticoke.

Nanticoke holds a rich history of hard working men and women who against all odds left us with a heritage of which we can be proud. To learn more, go to our facebook page and web site.

All that the historians give us are little oases in the desert of time, and we linger fondly in these, forgetting the vast tracks between one and another that were trodden by the weary generations of men. ~John Alfred Spender, The Comments of Bagshot

Samantha Mill Pens poem in 1910.

Here are excerpts of an untitled poem Samantha Mill penned, perhaps as she sat at the window of her family home describing all she surveyed. The poem can be seen in its entirety on our web site www.nanticokehistoryonline.org

On May the twentieth day, and clear
And nineteen hundred and ten the year,
Is century birthday of Mill-ground.
Here, two descendants still are found.

The open fireplace, stone immense,
With hearth and log, for fire intense
And crane and hooks, and kettle old
With sweetest thoughts of joys untold.

The library good, the books combined,
For pleasure and for food for mind,
The Holy Word of peace and rest
The poets sweet, and novels best.

The vegetables in garden placed,
With poppies scattered, interlaced.
Grandmother's old and dainty pinks
The fragrance, sweet connecting links

The boxwood old, no more is seen,
But shrub and lilac still are green
And bitter rue and celandine
And comfrey root and sage, tea vine

And ramble round, from street of Main
To Street of Green and Street Mill Lane
Across ravine attractive too
To College Street, is garden through

And View the scenic mountain blue
Or oft of purple deep and hue
Or misty grey or red and brown
Or shaded green surrounds the town

The sweet and silent silvery eve
It is the beauty hour believe
As damper softly falls o'er day
Amid a radiant light display

Samantha J. Mill
