Does God Care About the Presidential Election?

Billy Graham's Answer

Election season is in full swing, but many are still unsure who to vote for. Maybe that's you, or maybe you don't plan to vote at all. Let Billy Graham's answer about voting and politics encourage you.

Q: I know the elections are still many months away, but I'm already tired of all the name-calling and the overblown rhetoric. I've decided just to shut my mind to it all. I don't think God really cares about politics anyway, does He?

A: God cares about everything that affects our lives—including who our leaders will be and how our society will be governed. That's one reason why He commanded us to pray for our government and its leaders. Would He have told us to do this if He didn't care about good government? Of course not. The Bible says, "I urge then, first of all, that petitions, prayers, intercession and thanksgiving be made ... for kings and all those in authority" (1 Timothy 2:1-2).

Many readers probably can sympathize with your attitude toward too much rhetoric or too many ads. But don't let these blind you to the importance of our elections, or cause you to shut your mind to our nation's need for honest and able leaders. Our system may not be perfect—but it's far better than that in many other nations.

Pray for our nation, especially as we look forward to elections a year from now. Pray especially that God will raise up leaders who will stand for justice and morality, and will seek God's will in all they do.

Pray too that our nation will turn to God, and that we may experience true spiritual revival. Increasingly we seem to be pushing God out of our lives as a nation—and this will have tragic consequences. Don't let this happen to you, but make sure of your commitment to Christ, and seek to follow Him every day.

The Bible's standard is still true: "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord" (Psalm 33:12).
