Two weeks before the anniversary of September 11th, I realized, I had been in denial for almost a year. My nieces, Ana Inclan and Tanya Gwynn and I were witnesses to one of the most disastrous days in history, certainly the worst day of our lives. We have a story that needs to be told in remembrance of all of those lost; a story we need to remember for the rest of our lives.

As a photographer, it was natural for me to record the event with my camera. I took hundreds of images and neatly stored them away until August, this year. Frankly, no one wanted to see them, neither did I. However, they depict that day, that time, history that should never be forgotten.

Last year was different from all others. My values have changed. I am deeply aware of how short life can be. The people in our lives must take priority over all other aspects of living.

This project helped me to discover the pain I had buried. The story tells how September 11th affected us, so many New Yorkers, America; how we managed our lives, our fears. Please read our story and remember. Now, I can . . . will move on.

SEPTEMBER 11TH

September 11th began at midnight for me as I anxiously awaited the arrival of my nieces from our home state, Oregon. Ana and Tanya arrived at 12:30 a.m., full of enthusiasm for their upcoming week. This was Tanya's first trip to New York. "Do you want to see the view?" Up we went to the roof of my 26-floor co-op, just six blocks from the Empire State Building. The view was spectacular. The sky was clear and starlight bright. The Chrysler Building, the World Trade Towers, the Empire State Building were breathtaking. Tanya couldn't believe her eyes. "It's just like in the movies, only better! What a great start for our visit!"

At 3:30 a.m. we decided to get some sleep. I woke at 8:40, the girls still sleeping in another room. I lay quietly thinking about all the fun things we were going to do.

Planes have crashed into the World Trade Towers

The phone rang. I looked at the clock. It was 9:08. Leslie, my friend in Oregon asked, "Do you have the television on? Planes have crashed into the World Trade Towers." I turned on the set. I couldn't believe my eyes. "I have to go."

I opened the door to the roof. There stood a lone man with a gun strapped to his waist. I learned he was a neighbor, a policeman. Somehow I felt a little safer with him and his gun.

I got dressed and went to the sleeping girls. "Two kamikazes have flown into the World Trade Towers. I'm going to the roof". I grabbed my camera bag and tripod. It was 9:15.

My neighbor and I watched the Towers, occasionally snapping pictures, recording the event. My artist's eye couldn't help but see the beautiful blue sky, the colors and textures of the billowing smoke, gliding to the east. My heart felt shame. "How could I photograph such a horrific event? So many terrified people are losing and giving their lives." Still, I shot on.

Please, God. Help Them Stand

I looked through my close-up lens, thinking, "The Towers look strong. If they can just put out the fire." I turned to my neighbor, "I think it's going to be alright. I think they are going to stand. Those guys thought they could destroy us. We're going to show them. It's going to be all right.

We're going to be okay."

Just then, the South Tower
collapsed.

I wailed with anguish and fear.

I saw

WAR!

written in smoke.

Oh, NO! . . .
Oh, dear God!

What will happen now?
Who is this enemy? How many more lives will be lost?
Will more of our city, our country be attacked? Will this be the beginning of the end? I couldn't stop crying.

It was 9:59.

Lower Manhattan looked the way we felt for many weeks to come.

I ran out of film. I went downstairs. The girls were glued to the television with phones to their ears. With more film in my pockets, I went back to the roof.

One World Trade Center Falls . . .

New Yorkers Watch Helplessly

As I was going up in the elevator,
the North Tower collapsed.

It was 10:28.

Two short hours!

By 10:45, the rooftops emptied. Two short hours! Those magnificent towers, gone. Countless dead and injured. I looked at the beautiful Empire State Building. "What's next? Will it be there, tomorrow? What about germ warfare? Our water supplies? It's time to take stock. I have to take care of the girls. I went downstairs. I better call Mom and Dad. Who do I know in Wall Street? I have to find them. Calm down. I can't frighten the girls any more than they are."

What next?

The three of us went to the store. Shelves were emptying, supplies dwindling. We bought the last of the bottled water, a Walkman, a back-up radio and extra batteries. We went home. At 2:00 p.m. we left to give blood. New York University Hospital already had all they could store.

4:30 p.m.

By then, the streets were filled with walkers covered in ash. Each face mirrored the disaster and fear of an unknown enemy. Yesterday, I would never think of taking another person's life. Today, I would do anything, to protect these two beautiful girls, my family, my friends. Two short hours. Our world changed.

What Will Tomorrow Bring?

September 12th

Our First Day of Denial

It's amazing how the human mind works. We just suffered the worst day of our lives. Today, we are trying to figure out what to do next. How do we get on with our lives? We had to think of other things. Create a distraction. Set aside our fear. Pretend.

September 10th, Ana and Tanya thought they had a terrible flight to New York. Their plane had arrived late in Minneapolis. They missed their connecting flight. Being their resourceful selves, they made a beeline for another flight through Detroit. That's why they arrived so late on the 11th with only their carry-ons. With no change of clothes the girls just didn't feel like themselves. We hadn't been cautioned to stay home, so we decided to go shopping, an appropriate distraction.

After a couple of hours and a few purchases in Strawberry's, I suggested we go uptown to the hot, new store, H&M. We also could do some sightseeing. After all, this was supposed to be their vacation. We walked through Grand Central. It was almost 4:30 p.m. It was so quiet. We walked up Madison and over to 5th Avenue. By then it was 5:00. The streets were so empty for this time of day. The people on the street were obviously out-of-towners. New Yorkers were staying home, close to their families. These people were stuck in New York and like us, trying to make the best of it. We tried to enjoy our outing as much as we could.

We strolled through Saks, admiring the luxurious accessories. Outside we looked at the windows. Saks had dismantled their fashion displays and replaced them with sentiments for yesterday's tragedy. There was no escaping our sorrow.

The majesty of New York

We sought it's beauty

Saint Patrick's Cathedral

We went on to H&M. Just as expected, the girls thought it a great find. After awhile I told them I would meet them at St. Patrick's. There is where, I needed to be.

We went through the heavy brass doors of St. Patrick's. The cool, dark sanctuary glowed with candles, lit for the victims. Here, the great silence was a communion of prayer. In the pews sat mourners and frightened people; people were seeking the solace of a higher power. We wanted direction and answers, something to soothe our weary bodies and souls.

Survivors

Shopping done and feet worn out, we headed towards home. On the way I decided we needed the company of other people and a drink or two, so we went to my neighborhood bar. There we met, Steve, Steve and Seth, new, out-of-town recruits of Morgan Stanley and survivors from the 61st floor of the South Tower. Seth, the wiz-kid, just turned 21 in August. A stoic, young man who claimed he was fine. Steve, 26, told their story. He described their journey down the stairwell. At the 54th floor, they heard the loud speaker say that it was okay for them to return to work. Steve was a pilot and recognized the smell of jet fuel and said no way. Some of their colleagues did as they were told and returned to work for the last time.

These young men went on, helping others along the way. When they reached the 19th floor, the second jet hit their tower. They thought they would never reach the bottom. They were only a block away when the South Tower collapsed.

Then we heard on the television there was a bomb threat at the Empire State building. A six block radius was evacuated. I looked to the girls and said, "We're getting out of here. I am not worrying my family or yours. We're going uptown until all is safe. You guys want to come with us?" The six of us went out the door in a moment. Cell phone in hand, we all took turns calling our families. We assured them we would not be near any potential danger that night or any other.

Marilyn A. Erickson © 2001

September 13th

Up until the wee hours, we slept late today. Tanya decided she wanted to go back to Strawberry's for something she had forgotten. She returned in no time, ashen-faced. There was a bomb threat at Grand Central. She was evacuated to the middle of 42nd street; then high-tailed it home.

It was all wearing on the girls. They wanted to go home. The airports were closed. They had no choice. Back to denial.

On to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. We surveyed the whole museum and spent hours with the Impressionists.

We walked through Central Park. Stopped in vest-pocket parks, the City's version of nature, for a few Zen moments.

We stopped by this Cuban memorial. Ana heard today that Fidel Castro was sympathetic to our disaster. She thought it hilarious to think of needing help or support from Cuba. Ana's and Tanya's Cuban heritage made this unimaginable. Ana said, "This proves it's the World's war, not just ours."

September 14th - Candle Light Vigil at Union Square

Marilyn A. Erickson © 2001

Activists protest in silence. Tens of thousands of people are here for the vigil. The only sounds are the chants of the Tibetan monks and whispers. An amazingly quiet New York. An incredible sense of unity.

Thousands Remember Thousands at Union Square

“Missing” posters hang all around the city. People search for news of their loved ones. The city, the country, the world, light candles in memory of our lost.

Marilyn A. Erickson © 2001

September 15th

We could still hear military aircraft overhead. The Coast Guard was present in the waterways. A reporter told me the police radios were jammed with scares. Less and less was being reported in the news. Yet other crimes had virtually stopped. It seemed a higher consciousness had influenced us Americans.

The World War against terrorism had begun. The people of Afghanistan will also suffer because of the terrorists.

Please, God. Protect the innocent.

It was Saturday. I hadn't been to the roof since the 11th. I needed a personal update on the disaster. Only Lower Manhattan residents were allowed south of 14th street. The fire still burned. The smoke still billowed. The search went on for survivors. Blood was still in ample supply. So few needed it. Hope faded. Traffic into the city was limited to specific times and vehicles were searched. The airports finally opened with heavy security. Fortunately, there were no more attacks.

Marilyn A. Erickson © 2001

Tanya wanted to see the Statue of Liberty. We went down the east side, away from “ground zero” thinking we could get to the Staten Island Ferry. We were only able to go as far as Foley Square. Lafayette and Canal Street were also borders to the ‘no-go zone’. We walked to Canal Street. The military and police were at each intersection, making the people move along. We saw bits and pieces of the disaster. Truthfully, we were happy, not to get closer. We still yearned to see the New York, we wished we could remember.

We read and read, one "missing" poster after another. Tears welled in our eyes as we witnessed the desperate, hopeful efforts of loved ones. The number of victims was still unknown. There were no new reports of found survivors. All we could do was pray. "How could all of these victims look so beautiful, young, happy and full of life?"

Mourners Post Their Sentiments at Washington Square

September 21st

Ruth invited me down for lunch. She lives two blocks from the Trade Center and had stayed in Lower Manhattan since the event. In fact, she ran towards the Towers after the first impact. As she shared her incredible memories, I thought, "Will her 'normal' life ever return?"

Later, I walked towards Ground Zero. People with throwaway cameras were everywhere. The soot was inches deep, the air thick. I had to leave. Just looking, seemed sacrilegious. I headed for the Staten Island Ferry, my favorite sightseeing ride.

Battery Park
a fortress again

The Wall Street area was heavily guarded by the military. It looked so foreign.

MISSING - The World Trade Center

September 21st

A spectacular sunset in process. I'd never seen these beautiful colors, this time of day. I'd never seen The Empire State Building from this view.

I remembered my last ferry ride, July 5th with Dean. How changed the view, the world!

October 11th

O God, our words cannot express
The pain we feel this day.
Enraged, uncertain, we confess
Our need to bow and pray.

We grieve for all who lost their lives...
And for each injured one.
We pray for children, husbands, wives
Whose grief has just begun.

O Lord, we're called to offer prayer
For all our leaders, too.
May they, amid such great despair,
Be wise in all they do.

We trust your mercy and your grace;
In you we will not fear.
May peace and justice now embrace
Be with your people here.
