

ISSUE#14
MARCH, 2026

March is a meaningful month of recognition, reflection, and action. As we observe Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month and Brain Injury Awareness Month, AEHP proudly aligns this focus with our ongoing Raising Autism Series, a platform dedicated to education, empowerment, and advocacy for individuals and families navigating autism and related neurological conditions.

Understanding the Connection

Developmental disabilities and brain injuries impact millions of individuals and families across the country. These conditions can affect cognitive functioning, communication, mobility, behavior, and daily living skills. Autism spectrum disorder (ASD), traumatic brain injuries (TBI), and other neurodevelopmental conditions each present unique challenges, yet they share common themes:

- The need for early identification and intervention
- Access to equitable healthcare and educational resources
- Family-centered support systems
- Community inclusion and awareness

Through our Raising Autism Series, AEHP continues to spotlight these intersections, creating space for honest conversations, expert insights, and practical resources.

Why This Month Matters

Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month is a reminder that individuals with disabilities deserve not only support, but full inclusion and opportunity. Brain Injury Awareness Month reinforces the importance of prevention, treatment access, and long-term rehabilitation services.

Together, these observances emphasize:

- Advocacy for policies that expand services and protections
- Education that reduces stigma and misinformation
- Empowerment of caregivers and self-advocates
- Systems-level thinking to improve long-term outcomes

A Look Ahead

As part of our commitment to strengthening educational access and experience, AEHP is officially transitioning from the CANVAS LMS platform to our internal learning system: AEHP Academy.

This strategic move allows us to:

- Deliver a more customized, mission-aligned learning experience
- Streamline course navigation and user engagement
- Enhance data tracking and learner progress insights
- Expand future certification and training pathways

AEHP Academy reflects our long-term vision, building an educational infrastructure that supports professionals, careerists, students and community leaders with structured, accessible, and scalable programming.

Over the coming weeks, users will receive step-by-step transition guidance, login instructions, and support resources to ensure a seamless migration. Our goal is continuity without disruption, and growth without complexity.

Member Spotlight

She is an Afro-Caribbean entrepreneur and creative founder whose work is rooted in cultural identity, resilience, and intentional self-expression. Her path to entrepreneurship was shaped not by a linear plan, but by personal growth, reflection, and creative discipline. What began as a private crafting practice evolved into a purpose-driven venture inspired by her love of storytelling, atmosphere, and cats. In 2025, she launched her cat-themed candle company, creating a brand that blends artistry, comfort, and mindful living. Her work reflects a commitment to authenticity, emotional well-being, and thoughtful design, transforming uncertainty into innovation and creativity into impact.
