

SIGN ON THE DOTTED LINE

JUST A LITTLE PAPERWORK...

Many of you who contributed to the anthology checked a box that you understood the agreement. Normally an anthologist would send out a letter for you with an agreement, you'd sign it and email it back, they'd sign it and email it back to you. Lots of emailing.

Well, given the circumstances, that process may fail. So, importantly, a new online form will be created (similar to the previous one).

You will then check boxes, fill out pertinent info, and electronically sign (type) your name. That will serve as our agreement.

Once I get the ol' email doodle-boppy-thingy working again, I will send you back an email with my signature.

Sound like a plan?

A QUICK REMINDER

Your poem is not "exclusive" to this anthology.

You're absolutely welcome to submit it elsewhere or include it in future collections. The only favor I ask is that, if it's published somewhere else, you let the publisher know it also appears in the upcoming Silly Society Anthology.

ONE MORE THING...

The online form will also include a place for your author biography.

Please start thinking about a 2-3 sentence bio that you'd enjoy seeing in the back of the book.

Humor is encouraged (but not required).

(If your bio requires its own table of contents, it's probably a bit too long.)
