

2011 In Retrospect

By Frederick Wolfmeyer, President

The past year was quite a year. In the clerk and maintenance crafts our members were under the threat of excessing. The elevator operators sat in a 'standby' room for eight (8) hours a day for nearly a year drawing full pay while mail handlers, clerks, and supervisors operated the elevators. In November they were improperly excessed to the NDC, under the pretense that there was no work for them at the P&DC. However, as you all know, the elevators at the P&DC are still being operated by the mail handlers, clerks and supervisors.

A new collective bargaining agreement was fashioned at the national level, voted on, and ratified by the membership. This agreement created a whirlwind of grievance activity on the local and national levels. We have become very familiar with terms such as NTFT, PSE, 10/4, thirty (30) hour assignment and so forth. It seems that every day we learn something new from this agreement. Whether it concerns NTFT holiday pay, NTFT overtime issues or the issue of no mandatory overtime, it is a continuous learning experience. Personally, I have had more contact with our clerk NBAs in the short few months since the ratification of this agreement than I have had in the last five years. Several grievances have been filed by the local and some have been appealed to the dispute resolution process and more will follow.

The union also entered into local memorandum of understanding (LMOU) negotiations in 2011. I touched upon that process briefly in my last article, reporting that the union appealed an item of the LMOU to impasse arbitration. Management too, sent a few items to impasse. This came about after the parties had apparently reached an agreement, only for that agreement to fall apart. The union and management met on September 22, 2011, to sign the new LMOU, but management balked at the holiday pecking order to which they had agreed only a few days earlier. The lead negotiator stated that upper management would not allow him to sign the LMOU because the negotiated pecking order was, in their opinion, in conflict with the national agreement. Of course, that was not the case, but it caused a stalemate and the union stated that the current language should be carried forward and that it would impasse (send to arbitration) the item.

What is troubling about this situation, is that the parties involved in the negotiations did in fact reach an agreement, but upper management, which was not involved, intervened and took away the authority of the lead negotiator, thus voiding the agreement. In my opinion, this has destroyed management's credibility, and will only make future dealings with them more difficult.

On the legislative front, we need help. As you all know, the news is filled with stories and reports of the bleak financial status of the Postal Service. The pre-funding requirement in the Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act of 2006 is breaking the service. Many of us participated in the National Day of Action on September 27, 2011, to draw attention to the problem. We have written our congressmen and senators and have had our friends and families sign petitions asking for legislation to be passed to save the Postal Service. To date, only the union-busting, service-killing bill, HR-2309 has made it to the congressional floor. This bill is the creation of Darrell Issa, R-Calif., and Dennis Ross, R-Fla., two of the most anti-worker congressmen ever. This bill would end six-day delivery, eliminate our 'no layoff' clause, force senior workers to retire before junior workers, and stop door-to-door delivery of mail to 90 percent of all households in the United States by 2015. Obviously, we cannot allow this bill to be passed.

The alternative to this bill, one endorsed by all postal unions, is HR-1351. This bill stops the pre-funding requirement, returns the money overpaid into the postal pension funds, and keeps our collective bargaining rights intact. This bill has over 230 co-sponsors in the House, yet Mr. Issa, who controls the Oversight Committee, will not allow this bill to come out of committee. In the Senate, there is a bill, S-1853, the Postal Service Protection Act, which does what HR-1351 does and more. It was introduced by Independent Senator Bernie Sanders of Vermont and now has five co-sponsors. What it does beyond HR-1351 is authorize new ways to generate postal revenue, protect mail processing facilities by requiring strict delivery standards for first-class mail, and prevent the closure of rural post offices.

The closing of processing facilities, the downgrading of service standards, the closing of post offices, and, in our area, the closing of stations and branches, are issues that many of us never believed possible. Now we are threatened by each and every one of these issues. Recently, I have attended community meetings about the closing of Maplewood retail, Ferguson retail, the entire Giles Branch and Jefferson Memorial Branch and now I have learned of more. There are plans to possibly close, Soulard, Field, Berkeley, and Galleria branches. Where will it all end? Will our elected officials get off of their seats and finally address the post office's dilemma with a sense of urgency, or will we languish with inaction for another year? If the financial situation of the service is not addressed soon, we may all be reminiscing about what a great institution we used to have before it went bankrupt.

On a positive note, 2011 did see the local purchase the building at 1705 S Broadway. You, the members, have a wonderful asset that is already worth $250,000 more than what was paid. We have replaced the roof with a membrane material type roof, along with insulation that has reduced the utility bills. The main A/C unit was also replaced with a more energy efficient one, thus reducing the utility costs even further. In addition, we entered into an agreement with the school next door to use their hall for our union meetings at no cost until June of 2012 and for four years beyond for the low cost of $100 per month.

Enough reminiscing. Now we are in 2012 and other than the prediction that the world will end this year, many of the old 2011 issues listed above, are still with us. As a reminder, we all need to keep calling and writing our elected officials so that the Postal Service doesn't also come to an end in 2012. Remember too, that this is an election year, and we need to protect our jobs. The Missouri Legislature is going to try to pass an old nemesis, Right-to-Work, along with other anti-labor issues. And on the federal level, the anti-labor members of the Republican and Tea Parties will be out in force to elect more of their kind to perpetuate the great principles contained in the Citizens United decision from the Supreme Court. This body of judges rendered a decision that basically states that money is speech and corporations are people. With that decision in hand, the anti-labor rich can donate as much money as they want to a candidate's campaign. This puts every working man and woman and their workplace rights in peril. Don't for one minute think that these power-hungry corporations will do the right thing. They want to pay us nothing and they do not want us to have a voice. In order to stop their efforts we need to vote and have our families vote for candidates who support our position, who support organized labor, and who support workers' rights. Until next issue, continue the fight and come to your union meeting.

Congratulations

Nontraditional Fulltime (NTFTs) Employees: Regarding Sick Leave and Annual Leave

By Barb Sellini, Vice President

I first want to say I hope everyone had a wonderful, happy holiday and I wish all a very healthy and prosperous New Year. Two thousand twelve is here and the struggle continues for APWU and all of our members. Listed are some frequently asked questions and the responses as determined by Patrick Devine, A/MGR., Contract Administration Labor Relations, USPS at the national level and Mike Morris, national director, Industrial Relations, APWU dated October 6, 2011.

1. How will employees in NTFT duty assignments earn or accrue annual leave?

Employees in NTFT assignments with a regular schedule of 40 or more hours per week will receive an advance of AL equal to the maximum for their leave category. The employee will not receive additional AL credit for work hours in excess of 40 hours per week and excess hours will not be tracked as potential leave credit hours.

Employees in an NTFT assignment with a weekly schedule of less than 40 hours per week will receive a pro-rated advance of AL in the same manner as a PTR received it. For paid hours (hours worked and paid leave, not including donated leave) in excess of their scheduled amount, the employee will receive additional AL credit up to the maximum credit allowable for their leave category in the pay period. Excess hours that do not produce additional leave credit within the pay period will be tracked as potential leave credit hours and may produce additional leave credit in a future pay period as long as the total leave earned to date does not exceed the maximum allowed for an FT employee.

2. How will employees in NTFT duty assignments accrue sick leave?

Employees in NTFT duty assignments, with regular schedules of 40 hours per week or more, accrue four hours SL for each full biweekly pay period — which is 13 days (104 hours) per 26 pay period leave year. Employees in NTFT duty assignments with regular schedules of less than 40 hours per week will accrue

SL at the rate of one hour for each unit of 20 hours in a pay status up to 104 hours for the 26 pay period leave year. For paid hours (hours worked and paid leave, not including donated leave) in excess of their scheduled amount, the employee with regular schedules of less than 40 hours per week will receive additional SL credit up to the maximum credit allowed for a FT employee (up to 104 hours [13 days] per 26 pay period leave year). Excess hours that do not produce additional leave hours within a pay period will be tracked and may produce additional SL hours in a future pay period as long as the total leave earned to date does not exceed the maximum allowed an FT employee.

3. When using AL, how much leave per day will the employee in an NTFT duty assignment be charged?

The employee in an NTFT duty assignment will be charged leave for the amount equal to the work hours of their regular daily scheduled hours (six hours for a six-hour scheduled day) or for a balance of their scheduled hours for part-tour leave. NTFT duty assigned employees will be subject to the same leave regulations as all other career employees with regard to the substitution of LWOP in lieu of AL. Employees in NTFT duty assignments may elect at their option to utilize LWOP in lieu of AL for any hours in excess of 40 hours in a service week.

The same rules as stated for AL apply to using SL for employees in NTFT duty assignments.

4. What happens to AL that has been advanced to an employee in a NTFT duty assignment when they bid or are reassigned to/from traditional FT or to NTFT with a different scheduled work hour total per week?

They will have their advanced AL adjusted to reflect the advanced leave policy for the position of record.

I hope these questions and answers helped you understand a little more concerning the NTFT assignments and there will be more in the next issue of the PRESS ON.

HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL OF YOU!!!!

Editor's Corner By Shelia Patton-Harris

I would like to wish each and every one of you a happy and prosperous new year. We will once again be facing challenges from those who seem hell-bent on destroying the Postal Service. When they push us, we have to be ready to push back. I am sure that we will once again rise to the task.

The other day, some of us old-heads were sitting around discussing how different the main post office is from days gone by. One of the glaring differences is the present management style. Before we had all the machines and computers and technology, we relied on manual labor. We had a higher mail volume, but we still got the mail out. The old supervisor knew the mail and what their crew was capable of. They didn't play favorites and everyone was expected to pull his/her weight. Look at what is happening now. Even though they say the mail volume has decreased, the mail is not getting out. Too many supervisors are so busy doing our work, they can't seem to do the job they are being paid to do. It seems no matter how many people they hire, the clerks on the machines are still working short. Employees from all over the plant are brought to the outgoing section — some of them are not even clerks — in a feeble attempt to get the mail out. Clerks were recently excessed from the section because of the decreased mail volume, but overtime is now the order of the day.

No one wants to admit that it's just not working. Management makes a decision and they would rather fail than to admit it was a bad idea. If the numbers work on paper, then by golly, they should work on the floor. They keep trying to fit a square peg in a round hole. And when things go bad, they want to lay the blame squarely on the shoulders of the clerks. If the clerks would come to work; if the clerks would do their jobs; if the clerks followed our instructions ... are all reasons given by management to excuse their poor performance.

A provision in the new contract did away with mandatory overtime. This did not take effect until six months after the signing of the agreement. Management had six months to make the necessary adjustments needed for this provision. Why did they act as if it was a big surprise? They threw up their hands and said, "What are we suppose to do if we can't make the clerks work overtime? After all, it is December." The matter is simple. Clerks not on the ODL (overtime desired list) cannot be made to work overtime unless it is an emergency. Work the clerks on the ODL. This is when management skills come into play. They had six months to prepare and as usual they were not ready for the change. If you are a clerk and you are not on the ODL, you should not work overtime. If you want to work OT, sign the ODL for the next quarter. This provision was a long time coming and we don't want to give management any ammunition for circumventing it.

We have to do our part. If you see a manager performing your work, file a grievance. If they try and make you stay for overtime and you are not on the ODL, follow instructions but file a grievance. Be aware of what is going on in your section and if there is a problem, file a grievance. We can't let a few lousy managers destroy our jobs.

"Our needs are identical with labor needs — decent wages, fair working conditions, livable housing, old age security, health and welfare measures, conditions in which families can grow, have education for their children and respect in the community."

A Brief History of Neo-Slavery

By Shelia Patton-Harris

Many of you are too young to have experienced bigotry and discrimination first hand. You were never denied access to a restaurant or movie theater simply because of the color of your skin. You don't understand that until recently, blacks were not allowed in unions and were denied every human right. This article describes a very shameful period of history known as the Redemption.

After the Civil War, Northern soldiers left the newly freed blacks to their own devices and went home. A period of lawlessness and violence ensued known as "the Redemption." During this time many Southern blacks were forced into a form of slavery. Tens of thousands of men and women were forced into labor camps by dubious legal maneuvering. Using trumped up charges or minor charges with extreme penalties requiring extended jail or prison terms, blacks were incarcerated and their terms leased out to mines, farms, logging companies and a variety of industries, both public and private. These people worked in horrible conditions, long days, 6 days a week, poorly fed, poorly housed and they were often severely beaten. People died by the score and were buried in unmarked graves. The period was particularly violent toward blacks as indicated by the many lynchings and murders of black men not just in the Deep South but also in some Northern cities.

During the "Redemption," "forced labor" became the organizing concept upon which the "new slavery" was built. It appeared in several guises: past due debts, sharecropping, indentured or contract servitude, forced work camps, and prison release farms, as well as ordinary prisons, among others — all forms that were clearly both illicit and illegal.

Various forms of forced labor served the immediate needs of a fearful and defeated South. Through it, blacks were effectively returned to slavery. The system was allowed to flourish due to the collusion between big Northern corporations, such as U.S. Steel, and corrupt Southern municipal officials such as local town judges, sheriffs and others, who together saw it as their patriotic duty to deny and bar Negroes from exercising their newly won freedoms. This also served to eliminate them as potential competitors of the white working class.

Immediately after the Civil War and up until about 1950, in most cities of the South, black men without jobs could be swept off the streets and hauled into court, fined, and given lengthy jail sentences. Rules that required a prisoner to "work off his fine," meant that even light sentences often became indeterminate.

After many hard-fought battles, blacks were finally able to utilize organized labor to get some measure of fairness. Unions, even though they fought integration kicking and screaming, were some of the first organizations that offered a measure of equality. They knew that if blacks were not allowed to join labor unions, when they called for a strike, employers would simply replace white workers with blacks. This helped to bring about the end of forced labor camps.

Many of you may not see the relevance this "Redemption" has today. But those who fail to learn from the past are destined to repeat it. Discriminatory "crack" cocaine laws, which when coupled with incarceration for failure to pay child support and spousal abuse, results in a disproportionately large number of young single black men being swept off the streets and into the nation's jails. In today's society, sentencing guidelines are used capriciously to mete out much harsher sentences to blacks than to whites.

Hope May be on the Horizon. Senators Introduce 21st Century Postal Service Act

Article in the Postal Reporter Nov. 2, 2011

Washington — Today, Sen. Tom Carper, D-Del., chairman of the Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management, Government Information, Federal Services, and International Security, which oversees the U.S. Postal Service, joined Sens. Joe Lieberman, ID-Conn.; Susan Collins, R-Maine; and Scott Brown, R-Maine, to introduce the bipartisan 21st Century Postal Service Act of 2011. His statement, as prepared for delivery, follows:

“Over the past several months, Americans have realized the hard truth that the Postal Service is on the verge of financial collapse. Our troubled economy — coupled with the continued migration to electronic forms of communication — is putting the future of the Postal Service in jeopardy, and it’s happening faster than anyone ever expected, even just a few years ago. If we do nothing, we face a future without the valuable services the Postal Service provides. And if the Postal Service were to shut down, the impact on our economy would be dramatic.

“Although the situation is dire, it’s not hopeless. With the right tools and quick action from Congress and the Administration, the Postal Service can reform, right-size and modernize. The bill I introduced with Senators Lieberman, Collins and Brown presents a comprehensive and bipartisan solution to the Postal Services’ financial challenges that would keep it from collapse, protect the millions of jobs that rely on it, and enable this critical American institution to reform its business operations so it can continue to serve the American public for years to come. The time to act is now. It is my hope that Congress and the administration can come together on this plan in order to save the Postal Service before it’s too late.”

Buyouts and Retirement Incentives

The bill would give the postmaster general access to the money the United States Postal Service has overpaid into one of its pension funds (FERS) and use it to offer buyouts or retirement incentives to reduce the active postal workforce by 100,000 or more employees over the next several years. The incentives could include either a cash buyout of up to $25,000 or credited service years toward retirement annuity — up to one year for Civil Service Retirement System employees and up to two years for FERS employees. Any funds remaining after the Postal Service has completed this incentive program may be used to repay debt and meet obligations related to workers’ compensation, pensions and retiree health. USPS has estimated that reducing its workforce by 100,000 would save up to $8 billion annually.

Health Care Savings

The bill would immediately begin a 40-year amortized payment schedule for the Postal Service to fund retirees’ health benefits. It would also reduce the pre-fund goal to 80 percent. The bill also allows the amount of these payments to be reduced if the postmaster general and postal union representatives are able to reach consensus on a health plan that significantly reduces this liability. The Postal Service and its unions would have until September 2012 to negotiate a separate USPS health insurance plan. The bill would also require any retirees eligible for Medicare who are not enrolled in Parts A and B to enroll and directs the Postal Service to work with OPM to develop Medigap-like plans (with the same benefit level that employees receive under the current system) within FEHB for postal retirees and their dependants.

Workers’ Compensation Reforms

Right now, there are thousands of workers’ compensation beneficiaries over the age of retirement who are still receiving workers’ compensation benefits, even though they’ll likely never return to work. The bill contains critical reforms across the government (not just USPS) to rationalize the program and restore its original purpose — to help injured workers rehabilitate and return to work whenever possible.

The bill would set compensation for new enrollees under the Federal Employees Compensation Act (FECA) at 66 ²/₃ percent of salary at the time of injury until they reach retirement age. At retirement age, compensation would be reduced to 50 percent of salary at the time of injury. Compensation for current workers’ compensation recipients would not be changed if they were permanently and totally disabled and unable to work. The remaining beneficiaries over retirement age would receive 66 ²/₃ percent of their salary at the time of injury, starting three years after enactment. Current beneficiaries under retirement age would receive 66 ²/₃ percent of salary at time of injury starting three years after enactment, and then, upon reaching retirement age, 50 percent of pay at the time of injury.

The bill would also increase certain compensation amounts for death and disfigurement. The bill would also make a number of changes aimed at helping workers' compensation beneficiaries return to work, such as the development of and compliance with back-to-work plans and the expansion of the Department of Labor's authority to temporarily place recipients in new jobs. It would also take a number of steps to combat fraud.

Arbitration Standards

The bill would require that arbitrators deciding a contract dispute between the Postal Service and labor organizations take into consideration the following factors when rendering a binding decision: 1) the financial condition of the Postal Service; 2) the requirement in law that USPS consider comparability of wages and benefits to those offered in the private sector; and 3) the policies of Title 39, the section of the U.S. Code that deals with all matters of postal law.

Limitations on Five-Day Delivery

The bill would prohibit the Postal Service from implementing its plan to eliminate Saturday delivery for at least two years. The implementation could only move forward if the following conditions are met:

1. The Postal Service identifies customers who may be affected disproportionately by five-day delivery and develops remedies.
2. The Postal Service make full use of it authorities under current law and the new authorities and mandates included in this bill to increase revenue and reduce costs.
3. After implementing all other savings options, the Postal Service determines that a five-day schedule is still necessary to achieve sustainability. Once that decision is made, and demonstrated through careful financial analysis, the Government Accountability Office (GAO) would review that Postal Service's financial situation, projections, and the adequacy of savings initiatives already implemented in order to determine whether the implementation of five-day delivery is necessary. The Postal Service would not be able to implement a five-day schedule unless the Postal Regulatory Commission has found that the comptroller general has made a determination that doing so is financially necessary.

Streamlining Delivery

Under current practices, postal customers who don't rent post office boxes receive delivery in a number of ways: some receive mail at their door while others receive it in mail boxes at their curb or at centrally-located stations at the end of their block or in a residential building. The bill would authorize the Postal Service, where feasible, to deliver to curbside, sidewalk, or centralized mailboxes rather than to door delivery points no later than 2015. The change could save the Postal Service billions every year.

Retail Service Standards

The bill would require that the Postal Service develop service standards to guarantee customers a certain level of access to retail services, whether at a post office or alternative to a post office. The Postal Service must develop the standard, in consultation with the PRC, based on factors such as geography, population and the availability of transportation. Communities concerned that a proposed closure violates a standard could challenge the proposal before the PRC.

Processing Facilities

The bill would require the Postal Service to complete a study prior to the closure of a processing facility. The study must evaluate the option of downsizing rather than closing the facility. The bill would also establish a rigorous public comment opportunity and require a response to those comments from the Postal Service as well as documentation that important factors have been considered prior to closure.

New Products and Services

The bill would allow the Postal Service to offer non-postal products or services if the PRC had determined that the products and services: 1) make use of USPS's processing, transportation, delivery, retail network, or technology; 2) are consistent with the public interest and a demonstrated demand for the Postal Service to offer them; 3) do not create unfair competition with the private sector; and 4) have the potential to improve the Postal Service's financial condition. The bill would also allow the Postal Service to offer services on behalf of state and local governments as it does today on behalf of federal agencies and to ship wine and beer like its private sector competitors do.

The bill would not:

- Provide for a commission to decide facility closures.
- Establish a "solvency authority" with the power to change provisions of collective bargaining agreements.
- Override or breach collective bargaining agreements.
- Return overpayments the USPS made to the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS). Unlike the FERS overpayments, the CSRS overpayments are in dispute.

The Rise of the Regressive Right and the Reawakening of America

By Robert Reich

A fundamental war has been waged in this nation since its founding between progressive forces pushing us forward and regressive forces pulling us backward.

We are going to battle once again.

Progressives believe in openness, equal opportunity, and tolerance. Progressives assume we're all in it together. We all benefit from public investments in schools and health care and infrastructure. And we all do better with strong safety nets, reasonable constraints on Wall Street and big business, and a truly progressive tax system. Progressives worry when the rich and privileged become powerful enough to undermine democracy.

Regressives take the opposite position.

Eric Cantor, Paul Ryan, Rick Perry, Michele Bachmann and the other tribunes of today's Republican right aren't really conservatives. Their goal isn't to conserve what we have. It's to take us backwards.

They'd like to return to the 1920s — before Social Security, unemployment insurance, labor laws, the minimum wage, Medicare and Medicaid, worker safety laws, the Environmental Protection Act, the Glass-Steagall Act, the Securities and Exchange Act, and the Voting Rights Act.

In the 1920s Wall Street was unfettered, the rich grew far richer and everyone else went deep into debt, and the nation closed its doors to immigrants.

Rather than conserve the economy, these regressives want to resurrect the classical economics of the 1920s — the view that economic downturns are best addressed by doing nothing until the 'rot' is purged out the system (as Andrew Mellon, Herbert Hoover's treasury secretary, so decorously put it.)

In truth, if they had their way we'd be back in the late nineteenth century — before the federal income tax antitrust laws, the pure food and drug act, and the Federal Reserve.

A time when robber barons — railroad, financial, and oil titans — ran the country. A time of wrenching squalor for the many and mind-numbing wealth for the few.

Listen carefully to today's Republican right and you hear the same Social Darwinism Americans were fed more than a century ago to justify the brazen inequality of the Gilded Age: Survival of the fittest. Don't help the poor or unemployed or anyone who's fallen on bad times, they say, because this only encourages laziness. America will be strong only if we reward the rich and punish the needy.

The regressive right has slowly consolidated power over the last three decades as income and wealth have concentrated at the top. In the late 1970s the richest 1 percent of Americans received 9 percent of total income and held 18 percent of the nation's wealth; by 2007, they had more than 23 percent of total income and 35 percent of America's wealth. CEOs of the 1970s were paid 40 times the average worker's wage; now CEOs receive 300 times the typical workers' wage.

This concentration of income and wealth has generated the political heft to deregulate Wall Street and halve top tax rates. It has bankrolled the so-called Tea Party movement, and captured the House of Representatives and many state governments. Through a sequence of presidential appointments it has also overtaken the Supreme Court.

Scalia, Alito, Thomas, and Roberts (and all too often, Kennedy) claim they're conservative jurists. But they're judicial activists bent on overturning 75 years of jurisprudence by resurrecting state' rights, treating the second amendment as if America still relied on local militias, narrowing the Commerce Clause, and calling money speech and corporations people.

Yet the great arc of American history reveals an unmistakable pattern. Whenever privilege and power conspire to pull us backward, the nation eventually rallies and moves forward. Sometimes it takes an economic shock like the bursting of a giant speculative bubble; sometimes we just reach a tipping point where the frustrations of average Americans turn into action.

Look at the Progressive reforms between 1900 and 1916; the New Deal of the 1930s; the Civil Rights struggle of the 1950s and 1960s; the widening opportunities for women, minorities, people with disabilities, and gays and the environmental reforms of the 1970s.

In each of these eras, regressive forces reignited the progressive ideals on which America is built. The result was fundamental reform.

Perhaps this is what's beginning to happen again across America.

Reflections of a Friend

By Benevolence Committee

The death of my friend Jerry Mann on December 12 has caused me to really reflect on life. None of us are promised tomorrows in this life. Today, our dreams should be fulfilled in our God, those closest to us that we love and cherish and other people we encounter.

Jerry, you'll be missed! You always uplifted the spirits of those around you. Semper Fi.

CORRECTION

There were several veterans whose names did not appear on the list of veterans. I am truly sorry about the oversight.

John Brewington served in the U.S. Navy.

Richard Spratley was in the Army.

Melvin Broadnax is retired Air Force.

Larry Davis served in the Navy and he also had a birthday in December.

Thank you for your sacrifice.
