The organization's mission is to aid in the protection, preservation, and restoration of the natural environment of the nation's major rivers and their watersheds. From its single-boat beginning, LL&W has grown to an industrial-strength, internationally known organization with a fleet of barges and workboats.

To date, LL&W has removed over 14 million pounds of debris from America's rivers, engaged over 137,000 volunteers in hands-on initiatives, planted over 2 million trees, and educated over 30,000 students through free educational workshops. For more information, visit www.livinglandsandwaters.org
