◆ Pattern Set 67: Barcode Stickers 2"x4" (Wasp and Avery) Printing on paper 8 1/2 X 11. (See Sample stickers) Make your stickers ready for print using the Wasp Software.

In order to do this template you are going to need both Avery Design Pro and Wasp Bar Code Software. Simple bar codes

Fantastic merging of software

I cut and paste the barcode into the Avery program, or I build a simple barcode from the Avery wizard.

Wasp

Wasp is the premier software for making bar codes.

Most companies use bar code scanners for prices at the cash register. Wasp also have bar code options for

Avery

I use Avery because they have a lot of templates and matching sticker sizes. The paper is reliable and the print seems to stay within the stickers with reliability. (They can be ordered from their web site www.avery.com 1-800-462-8279.)

I started out with their software package so that I was on the right foundation at the start. It doesn't work well to use different templates for different company's stickers because they don't fit exactly. Many of the office supplies carry stickers, and give the 'Avery' template number on the front of the box.

You can key in the Avery template number when you open the software to make sure that you have the right size. The stickers that I used for the example which I developed this printing set for were from a different company. Make sure you put the Sticker side face down so that the print will be on the right side.
