MEDICAL TRANSCRIPTION

What is Medical Transcription?

Medical Transcription is the process of turning dictated (audio) medical information into typed records through use of wav audio files, foot pedals, and various file transfer software programs like Dropbox and Bytesscribe. Transcriptionists are responsible for receiving verbal information and typing that information into a word processing program, such as Microsoft Word or Word Perfect using the equipment provided by our program. This information must be transcribed accurately using the format specified by the provider (clinic notes, discharge summaries, and other report forms). Now that all hospitals and medical facilities are using electronic medical records, most transcriptionists now work remotely for companies all over the country.

Proficiency in computer and typing skills and the use of word processing programs is required before enrolling in this program. Most doctors or transcription companies ask for a minimum of 60 WPM, although typing at a faster rate is essential for earning a decent wage.

Medical Transcription is a profession that can also lead to transcription editing of reports generated by speech recognition software. Most jobs provide good pay and benefits with the opportunity to have an extremely flexible schedule and work environment. You can choose to work at home or in an office, providing services to professionals, such as medical providers, hospitals, insurance agencies, law offices, and physical therapy practices.
