

Dear Queen Gabby

Queen Gabby

Female Advice Expert

Queen Gabby is a flight attendant for a major airline and the female Advice Columnist.

She is a Slam poet and spoken word artist from Chicago. Queen Gabby is one of the founding members of SoYes2Poetry. She landed a position as the Female Advice Columnist for The SoulTown Magazine after dominating the Oakland poetry circuit with her provocative, opinionated poetry pieces. She also coached San Jose's youth Brave New Voices poetry team to competitions in Berkeley, CA, and Chicago, IL.

She is working on her first novel and currently resides in the Bay.

gab@thesoultownenterprise.com

Boots on the Ground Line Dance - Google It!

Q: Dear Queen Gabby,

First dates are always an adventure — but let me be clear: I have a few hard no's when it comes to where we're going. I'm not pulling up to a man's house, I'm not hopping in the car for a road trip, and I'm definitely not meeting your mama on date one. Sir, this is a date, not a documentary.

So tell me, Queen Gabby — what's on your first date "absolutely not" list? I know you've got a few!

~ Scary Sherry!

A: Hey Scary Sherry!

I know that's right, girl, set your boundaries! To be honest, I'm pretty adventurous. I am a "let's see where this goes" type of woman. I have been to a man's first house on a first date, and I do not prefer it AT ALL! An absolute no for me is bringing your kids along. Like what kind of childcare assistant do you think I am? Also, there are places where we have to be quiet. The movie theatre is not a good first date, and I don't want you whispering in my ear with popcorn breath.

I don't like places that have an excessive amount of seafood because I have a shellfish allergy. Going to a friend's house is weird, too. I don't even know you; why are you trying to introduce me to your squad? I also don't prefer to go to church on a first date. Church is an emotional experience so that we can save that for later. Other than that, let's go!

~ Queen Gabby

Q: Dear Queen Gabby,

I'm kind of an undercover introvert — quiet most days, but let some music drop, and suddenly I'm out on the floor dancing with a crowd like I've got a whole alter ego!

Lately, I've been wanting to learn the Boots on the Ground routine. Do you have any tips on how or where I can pick it up? Should I just crash a cookout and hope somebody's cousin takes the lead? Let me know where the people are stepping — I'll bring the potato salad (store-bought, but it still counts)!

~ Awkward Anita

A: Hey Awkward Anita,

Social media is your bestie in this situation. Especially if you do not get out often. I learn from some friends, but I am always out and about. Hop on Youtube or even TikTok. When you go out these days, everyone is doing dances they learned from TikTok anyway. If you want to be a part of some kind of step group, Google what's available in your area. Until that happens, practice in your living room so you won't embarrass us when trying to put what you've learned to the test.

~ Queen Gabby