

These cuts hurt patients.

Pending payment cuts threaten access to surgical care and stress our strained health care system.

Now is not the time to make payment cuts to any health care provider.

1 in 3 private practice surgeons are concerned they will have to shut down.

of surgeons suffered negative financial consequences due to COVID-19 such as taking on debt and laying off or furloughing employees

Payment cuts from the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) will hurt Medicare patients seeking surgical services.

- Medicare is the #1 source of funding for America's hospitals and our already strained healthcare system can't afford to lose additional funding.
- These significant cuts for most surgical procedures delivered to Medicare patients will exacerbate surgical workforce shortages and growing crisis of rural hospital closures.

HOW CONGRESS CAN HELP: STOP THE CUTS.

Congress can and should waive Medicare's budget neutrality requirements for the finalized evaluation and management (E/M) code policies that go into effect on January 1, 2021.

Congress should also apply the increased E/M adjustment to 10- and 90-day and maternity global code values.

The cuts explained.

- In January 2021, the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) will implement a new Calendar Year (CY) 2020 Medicare Physician Fee Schedule (PFS) that would pay surgeons less for their work.
- CMS will cut surgeons' payments to increase the payments for stand-alone office and outpatient visits for some physicians in 2021.
- CMS is picking winners and losers among physician specialties for the same work. These cuts not only threaten access to surgical care, but also stress an already fragile health care system that is under strain from COVID-19.

The impact.

Rulemaking is zero sum—gains to one type of provider affect the others. Without intervention, CMS will reduce access to surgical care and prioritize some physicians over others.
