In addition to recording the libero exchanges, the Libero Tracker must note the serving position of the libero to help ensure that the libero only serves in one position in each game. When a libero contacts the ball to serve, a triangle is written around the corresponding Roman numeral in the “Serving Order” column to note the only service order where the libero can serve for the remainder of the game.

QUIZ #1

1. A captain is not required on the line up sheet?
2. Once the line up sheet is recorded on the score sheet can the line up be changed?
3. Do you triangle the player's number or position when the libero serves?

YES! Once the libero serves, that service position is the only rotation where the libero can serve in the current game. However, the libero isn't required to serve - when the team is in that rotation, the server can be either the libero, the player the libero replaced, or any legal substitute for the starting player in that position.
