This table shows the bulls in birth date order, with the oldest bulls first. These are actual weights at birth, then on weaning day, on feed day, off feed day and finally on March 17th of this year. The weights are not adjusted for age. The bulls were fed a corn ration on grass for 85 days at 2% of their body weight daily, such that they gained just under 3 lbs/day on average. The carcass data was collected by ultrasound to get an indication of performance relative to each other on corn, without getting them so fat that it could threaten their health. They have been wintered on dormant grass, supplemented with 8 pounds of 14% cake daily and grass hay during bad weather. They are in good condition, and should continue to gain weight while breeding your cows this summer.
