Welcome to
RISEUP WEALTH SUMMIT
Elevate 360!

Dear RiseUp Wealth Summit Attendees,

Welcome to the RiseUp Wealth Summit under the theme of Elevate 360! It is with great excitement and anticipation that we extend our warmest greetings to every one of you.

Elevate 360 embodies our collective commitment to transcend boundaries and soar to new heights in all aspects of our lives. From financial prosperity to emotional well-being, from physical vitality to spiritual enlightenment, Elevate 360 beckons us to elevate every facet of our existence.

This event is meticulously curated with the vision of empowering individuals, families, and particularly our youth, to grasp the profound significance of generational wealth and legacy.

We firmly believe in the transformative power of generational wealth in breaking chains and paving the way for future generations to thrive.

Throughout the summit, you will be immersed in insightful panel discussions, enlightening sessions, and engaging interactions that will equip you with the tools, knowledge, and inspiration to become Generational ChainBreakers. Together, we will forge a path towards breaking through the constraints of our familial histories and rewriting the narrative of prosperity for generations to come.

As you embark on this enriching journey with us, we encourage you to embrace every opportunity to learn, grow, and connect with fellow attendees who share your aspirations for a brighter future. Let us unite in our pursuit of excellence, resilience, and abundance.

Once again, we extend our heartfelt welcome to the RiseUp Wealth Summit: Elevate 360. May this event be a catalyst for profound transformation and enduring success in your personal and professional endeavors.

With warm regards,

Glenn & Abiesha Payne

WAYNE THOMPSON

A Trailblazer Of
OUR TIME

In the picturesque landscapes of Jamaica, where the vibrant culture dances to its own rhythm, a young boy began a journey that would shape his destiny. As the son of an immigrant family, he faced early challenges that would ignite a flame within him, propelling him toward a life of purpose and entrepreneurship. Here, we unravel the inspiring story of a trailblazer—Wayne Thompson—whose experiences in both Jamaica and the United States forged an indomitable spirit, a spirit that now guides him as a successful entrepreneur, mentor, and disruptor.

Growing up in Jamaica has indelibly marked my path and fuels my drive to this day. I can vividly recall one of my earliest memories when I was about five or six years old— a time when we were abruptly evicted from my paternal grandmother's home. We found ourselves homeless, thrust into uncertainty by a bitter family dispute. Witnessing my mother's unwavering strength as she grappled with the weight of caring for her two toddler children in such dire circumstances left a mark on me. I saw her sacrifice, even going hungry to ensure we had something to eat. At that moment, I made a solemn vow to myself, never again would my family endure such hardship.

Another pivotal moment came when I was just eight years old. My father, a distant figure in my life at the time, sent me a bicycle. In our corner of Jamaica, owning a bicycle made you an instant celebrity. Yet, amidst our hunger and uncertainty, I couldn't reconcile the gift with our pressing needs. So, I made a bold decision—I traded the bicycle for a mother goat. To me, this represented more than just a transaction; it was a strategic move born out of necessity. I saw potential in that goat, envisioning a future where its offspring could provide for our family. Through sheer resourcefulness and entrepreneurial spirit, we multiplied our assets, eventually opening a small shop (bodega)—our gateway to economic independence.

I migrated to the United States with my brother at the age of 14. It was our first time on a plane, our first time away from our mother, with only the clothes on our backs. Our mother decided we shouldn't bring anything to our new home as there was no need for our old clothes, now that we were going to America. The journey was filled with delays, uncertainty, anticipation, and hunger. Our mother had taught us to not eat anything outside of home, so despite being offered food on our flight, we did not eat anything that entire day. Additionally, my dad sat in front of the plane, and my brother and I sat in the back so we did not have his guidance. Once we landed in Queens, New York, our new reality hit us as we met kids with completely different lifestyles.

Adapting to the cultural shift was a gradual process, especially when I embarked on my first day of high school. The emphasis placed on clothing by my fellow students was stark, contrasting with the secondhand clothes I wore. The dynamics of teacher-student relationships and the level of respect afforded to educators also proved to be different from what I knew in Jamaica. My school in Queens was predominantly attended by African-American and Caribbean students, prompting me to swiftly navigate and find my niche. Nevertheless, in that initial year, my grades suffered as I attempted to integrate, contrasted with my education in Jamaica, where I was considered part of the 'smart' group. The treatment in Queens reflected the differences because in the US, being the "smart kid" did not carry the same weight at that time. However, I met a teacher, Ms. Janice Sutton, who would forever change my life.

My journey into Engineering was sparked by a conversation with an electrician while working for my father's construction business. In the course of a conversation, he mentioned Electrical Engineers make a lot of money. Unaware of what electrical engineers did, I researched the field and chose it as my career path. Telecom entered my life out of necessity. Despite attractive job offers from Wall Street, I opted for a position at NYNEX, the local telephone company that would afford me the technical expertise I desired at the time. It wasn't glamorous, but it provided immediate employment after graduation which is something I also needed. My role as a Central Office Engineer introduced me to three retiring mentors, whose guidance fueled my growth. Three years later, I left NYNEX to start a business, eventually leading me to Cablevision, where I played a key role in launching innovative services. This journey paved the way for Albion Ventures, and reflecting now, I see how one decision, born out of necessity, unfolded a series of remarkable opportunities.

That early foray into entrepreneurship at 8 years old ignited a fire within me. I realized that education and entrepreneurship held the keys to transforming not just our circumstances, but our entire trajectory in life. It was a revelation—a testament to the power of resilience and determination in the face of adversity. From those humble beginnings in Jamaica, I gleaned invaluable lessons that continue to shape my journey today. Armed with the belief that through perseverance and vision, we can transcend any obstacle, I forge ahead, driven by the conviction that our past does not dictate our future, but rather serves as the catalyst for our greatest triumphs.

My continued journey of success in business and leadership I realize is fueled by my life experiences, the guidance of great mentors, the foundation of my education, the richness of my spiritual life, my family, and myriad other factors that have shaped my approach. While my multicultural background is not a conscious driving force, it indirectly influences the lens through which I observe the world and also interact with the world. It is a journey experienced both from the vantage point of scarcity and abundance and allows me to connect with individuals from all walks of life at Albion Ventures. I have been molded into a compassionate, honest, and fair leader, nurturing an environment where everyone can thrive. As a black male, my unique perspective becomes a bridge, reaching out to employees and offering opportunities they might not have had otherwise. It stands as a testament to what is achievable, inspiring those who dare to dream beyond their circumstances. Albion Ventures' growth is a result of bonds forged over the years with colleagues. These relationships, built on trust and mutual respect, have attracted exceptional individuals to our company. Their collective experiences have been the catalyst for the rapid expansion we are witnessing today.

For me, leadership is more than a position; it's a calling to influence and inspire others to achieve their goals. It involves enhancing skills, improving communication, refining processes, and providing the necessary tools. This framework forms the backbone of how I lead Albion Ventures.

Starting and running a business is an enduring challenge, necessitating a grounding in the initial purpose, core values, and defined targets. In the face of ongoing challenges at Albion Ventures, including cash flow, process enhancements, operational excellence, structural adjustments, and employee alignment, it becomes imperative to return to these foundational principles. The journey is ongoing, with the expectation that growth will be fueled by continuous improvement (Kaizen), effective communication, robust reporting systems, and an unwavering focus on delivering Outstanding Customer Service (OCS). While we may not have conquered all challenges, the commitment to learn and adapt as we grow remains at the forefront. Automation, streamlining processes, and leveraging our vision, mission, and company DNA are the tools we employ to position Albion Ventures for expansion.

The Importance of Mentorship

Looking back at my formative years, my mother emerges as my biggest inspiration. Her resilience in the face of adversity, from fleeing her home to becoming a shop owner supporting an extended family, demonstrated the transformative power of entrepreneurship. Ms. Janice Sutton, my high school teacher, recognized the potential in me that I couldn't see, opening the doors to Columbia University by applying for me and instilling the belief that I could achieve greatness. The path was further illuminated by mentors like Henry, TK, Merrit whom I replaced at NYNEX, and Robert Covell. Their guidance navigated me through the intricate demands of corporate leadership. Each mentor played a crucial role, offering insights, knowledge, and support that propelled me forward. Mentorship has become a cornerstone in my life and leadership philosophy. It is one of the seven principles that I emphasize in my 7P seminars, recognizing its importance in unlocking talents, gifts, and abilities that lead to lasting success. The journey is ongoing, as I continue to seek out and learn from those who have walked this path before me.

What Was A Turning Point In Your Career That Influenced Your Entrepreneurial Path?

Reflecting on my entrepreneurial trajectory, two pivotal turning points stand out. The first, trading my bicycle for a goat, resulted in my family opening a shop (bodega). This experience not only underscored the impact of entrepreneurship on family dynamics but also instilled lessons in calculated risks, effective planning, and the ability to envision the future beyond immediate circumstances.

The second turning point unfolded during my tenure at GlobeNet after leaving NYNEX, where I held a minority ownership stake. The rapid growth of the business, while exhilarating, brought about its own set of challenges. It taught me that growth, while desirable, must be managed with proper tools, processes, people, and delivering quality of service. This lesson became instrumental in steering Albion Ventures through its current phase of growth, emphasizing the importance of a balanced and strategic approach to expansion.

Wayne Thompson's journey as an entrepreneur and advocate for personal and community growth unfolds through three impactful ventures.

Conspectus, born out of Wayne's staffing and recruiting company, addresses the prevalent challenge of poorly crafted resumes. Recognizing the need for a streamlined process, Wayne invested in an online platform allowing individuals to create professional resumes. Real resume writers are available for guidance, making this venture a valuable resource for professional development.

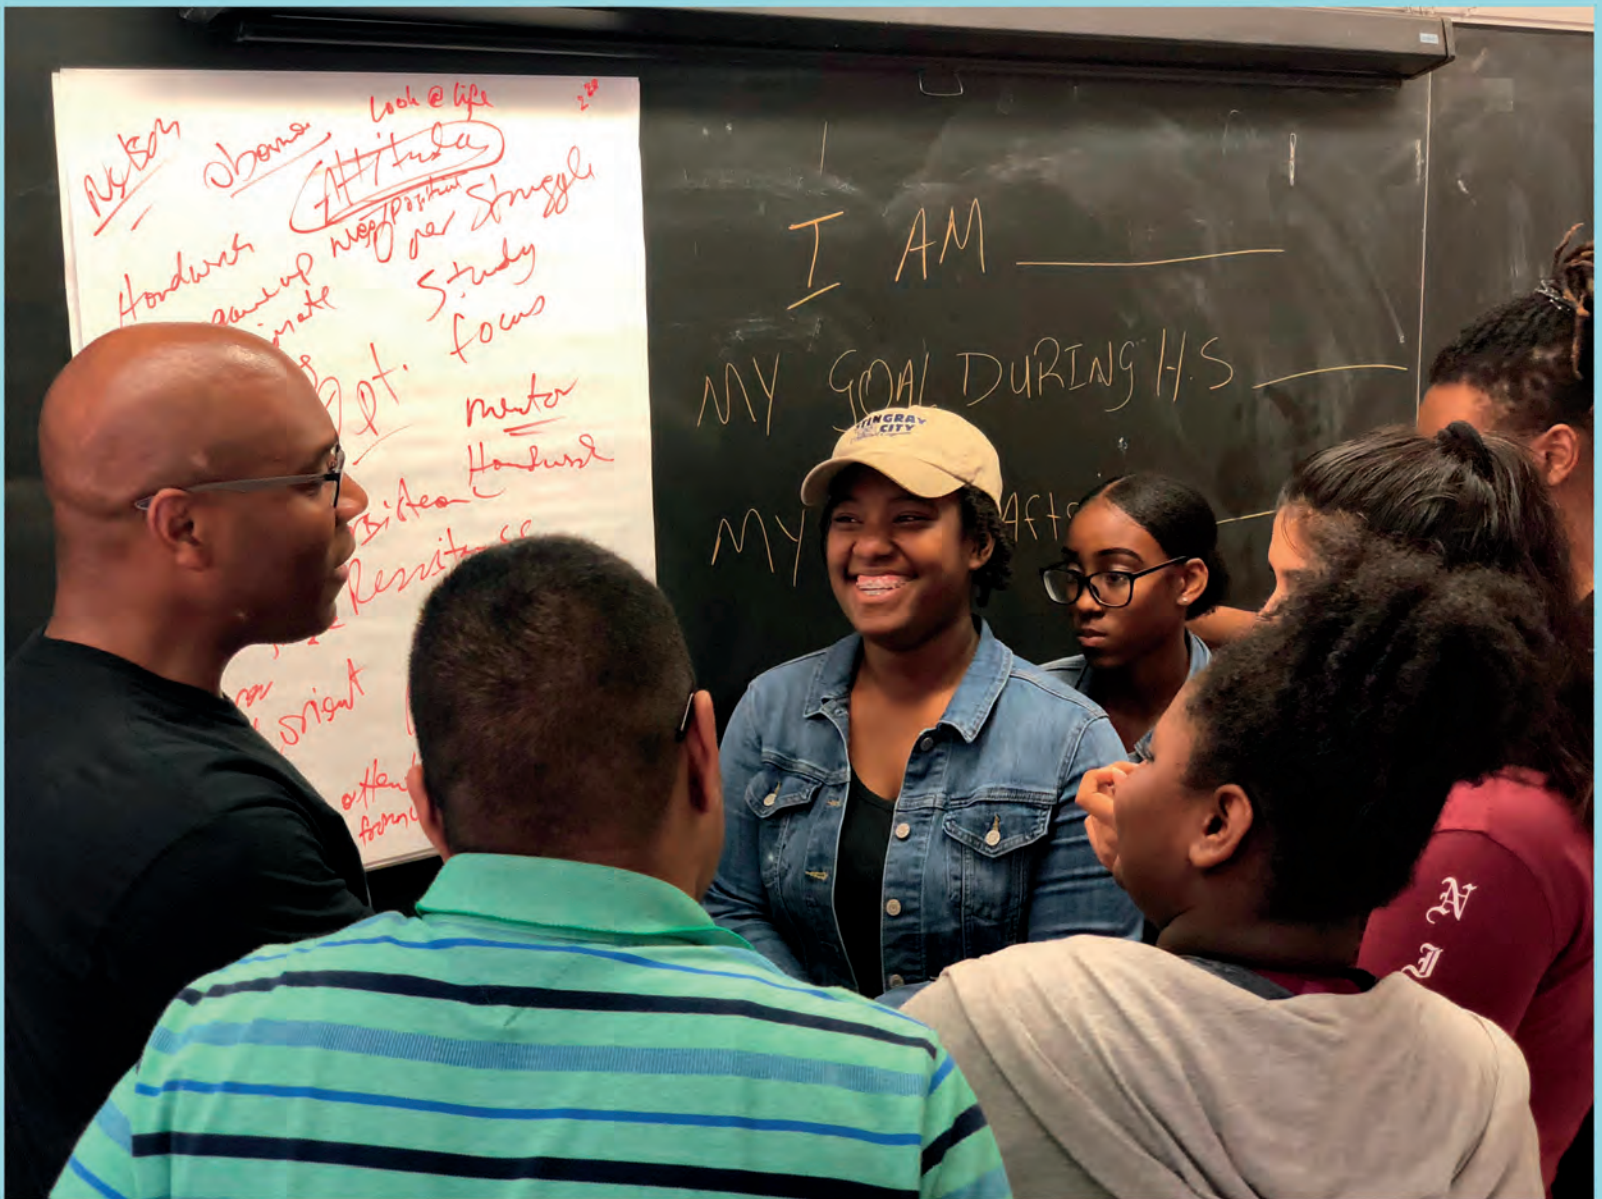

In the realm of entrepreneurial education and collaboration, Wayne established 7P. This initiative grew from his experiences with entrepreneurs at various stages of their journeys. Functioning as an educational hub and incubator, 7P leverages workshops, seminars, and conferences to facilitate knowledge-sharing and growth within the entrepreneurial community. Wayne identified seven principles, the 7Ps, crucial for lasting success: education, mentorship and relationship, purpose, significance, perseverance, capacity, and intentionality.

Strategic Opportunities Achieving Results (S.O.A.R!) a non-profit founded by Wayne and his wife embodies their commitment to making a positive impact on individuals and communities. This non-profit venture focuses on scholarships, mentorship for at-risk youth, educational assistance including laptops for children, and the heartwarming "Toys for Orphans" initiative. The Janice M. Sutton Scholarship fund, created seven years ago, has provided 53 scholarships to date, honoring Wayne's teacher who played a pivotal role in his academic journey. Every year, we witness an increasing number of schools participating, and one of the great joys I experience is going into these schools to distribute our checks.

and reflecting now, I see how one decision, born out of necessity, unfolded a series of remarkable

Mentorship is a core aspect of our work, primarily focusing on at-risk kids, such as those in the foster care system. My wife returned to law school in her late thirties to assist at-risk youths in the system and address educational issues affecting some of the most vulnerable kids. Although our mentors are few in number, their commitment to working with these children and providing unwavering support is crucial. Our approach is niche and strategic.

In terms of Educational Assistance, we supply laptops to children and organize college tour trips and other activities to broaden our children's horizons and show them what is possible. Our commitment to making a positive impact extends to Toys for Orphans. When my daughter was 8 years old, she pledged to help as many kids as possible experience the joy of opening a toy. Since then, we have collected thousands of toys, sending them to various orphanages, group homes, and locations worldwide, including places much closer to home, like the US-Mexico border. We aim to give kids the opportunity to open a brand-new toy and experience the happiness it brings.

Wayne's Advice for Aspiring Entrepreneurs

- Craft a comprehensive plan with a clear vision and mission.
- Understand the driving force behind your venture, visualize possibilities, and recognize the needs of your customers and team.
- Immerse yourself in industry knowledge.
- Acknowledge your capacity for more than you realize.
- Take action—anticipate unforeseen challenges and be ready to adjust.
- Cultivate the right attitude, make decisions, and be accountable.
- Be open to change, value others' ideas, and maintain flexibility.
- Be intentional, and curious, communicate effectively, and remember to inject some fun into the journey.

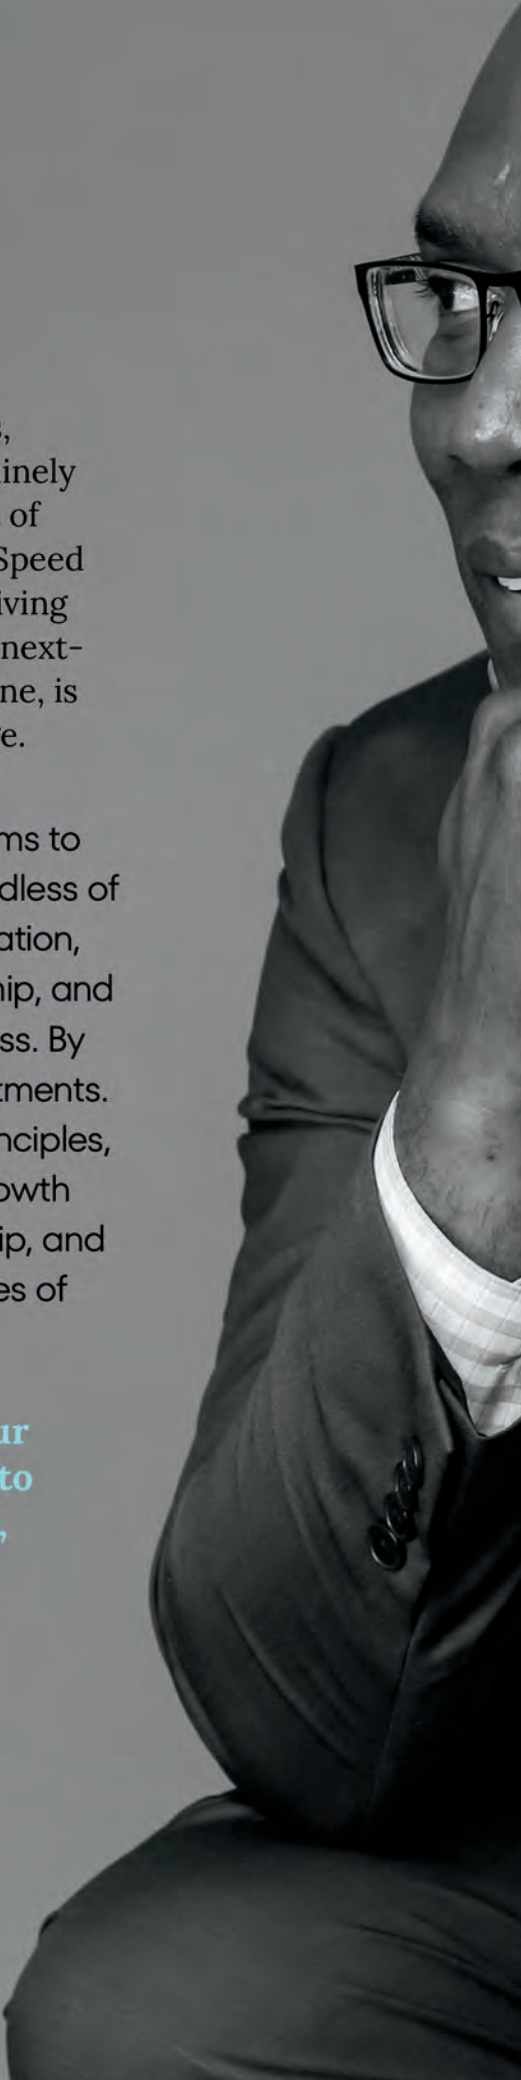

Qualities of an Effective Entrepreneur and Thought Leader

Key attributes include focus, active listening, proactiveness, collaboration, curiosity, asking challenging questions, creativity, decisiveness, and disciplined action. An effective problem-solving entrepreneur and thought leader navigates challenges with intention, a keen ear, and a creative mindset.

Wayne's Thoughts on Managing Multiple Ventures

Achieving balance might be elusive, but effective management requires the right team, repeatable systems, and intentional time management. Trust in your team is crucial; empower individuals to make decisions. Communication, listening, and learning about each other define our decision-making process. Some decisions require my involvement, while others can be handled autonomously. This dynamic ensures that each venture receives the necessary attention.

Being a disruptor involves pushing industry boundaries, innovating processes, and implementing changes that genuinely add value. Throughout his career, Wayne has been a part of disruptive initiatives, such as launching Cablevision's High-Speed Data and Voice IP services. At Albion Ventures, they are driving innovative solutions, from transitioning telecom carriers to next-gen AI-powered automation platforms. Disruption, for Wayne, is about challenging the norm and creating tangible change.

Wayne Thompson, a trailblazer of our time, his legacy aims to inspire belief in the possibility of achieving greatness, regardless of background or resources. Vision, hard work, focus, education, intentionality, capacity realization, team building, mentorship, and resilience are the keys and serve as a blueprint for success. By instilling the mindset of never giving up, and making adjustments. Wayne's hope is to prove that by implementing certain principles, anything is possible. Wayne's dedication to fostering growth extends beyond entrepreneurship to education, mentorship, and philanthropy, creating a profound ripple effect in the lives of individuals and communities alike.

Wayne's story encourages us all to believe in our potential, to relentlessly pursue our goals, and to embrace the idea that, with the right mindset, attitude, and discipline all things are indeed possible.

"Like many ambitious women, I struggled with perfectionism and fear of failure. My breakthrough moment came when I did meet failure head on. As awful as it was to fall short, I realized that failure wasn't an ending but a beginning. Through my failures, and my willingness to learn from them, success began to flow in my life — success that went beyond anything I'd thought possible."

Dr. Jessica Lytonia Clements, a native of Lumber City, GA has been characterized as a testament of perseverance and faith from the days of her youth. As Dr. Jessica watched her parents struggle by working long hours to provide the basics, she was determined to find a better way by going farther than her ancestors. This was the inspiration behind Dr. Jessica's pursuit of academic achievement with all of her heart.

Dr. Jessica became the first person in her family to obtain a Doctoral degree. Dr. Jessica holds a bachelor's Degree in finance from the University of Phoenix, a Masters's Degree in Christian Counseling from Pentefaiith Biblical Studies Institute, and a Doctoral in Theology from Pentefaiith Biblical Institute. With every achievement comes a test. Dr. Jessica has many monuments that serve as a memorial of the trials of life she's triumphed over. From multiple car repossessions, divorce, health challenges, and times when she thought life was over, her FAITH became the fuel to the fire that kept her going. It is Dr. Jessica's purpose to teach from her personal failures to bring all socio-economic communities into financial literacy. It is through her education coupled with personal experience that qualifies her in the one thing she believes God has purposed her to do. That is to teach and empower, making a lasting impact for generations to come.
