

Call for Papers: Volume 10, Journal of Law, Property, and Society (JLPS)

The Journal of Law, Property, and Society is the official journal of ALPS (<https://alps-law.org/jlps>) It is an online, open access, specialized journal dedicated to publishing a diversity of property scholarship of the highest quality. The JLPS is now in its 12th year, having published contributions since 2014 from esteemed global thought leaders in property law, property theory and interdisciplinary property studies. The Journal also appears in Hein Online. We invite you to consider publishing with the JLPS!

The Journal publishes three types of papers:

First, we invite you to submit traditional research articles. We prioritize publication of pieces presented at our annual meetings and encourage you to submit the project that you presented in Sydney for publication in the Journal. These are exclusive submissions that will be peer-reviewed in a double-blind process.

Second, JLPS publishes descriptive articles on property law. These articles are intended to be clear, authoritative, and useful introductions to a property topic. There are few existing venues for the publication of this kind of article, and creating a space for them was one of our goals in creating the Journal. If you are interested in submitting this type of article, we invite you to send an abstract describing your proposed topic.

Third, JLPS publishes book reviews, preferably reviewing books written by our members. If you have a book you would like to review or would like to have one of your publications reviewed, please contact us to pursue this option. Additionally, we are looking for willing reviewers so let us know if you would like to be added to the pool of potential reviewers.

Please submit your paper as a Word document with personal identifiers removed for consideration in volume 10. The Journal publishes its volumes from annual meeting to annual meeting. Volume 10 therefore runs from the Sydney Annual Meeting in June 2025 to the Tulane Annual Meeting in June 2026. Submissions may be made to JLPS@alps-law.org or via the link on the Journal's webpage at 'JLPS Submissions'.

Please let me know if you have any questions at JLPS@alps-law.org.

Best wishes,

John Page
Editor-in-Chief,
Journal of Law, Property, and Society