The Impact of Kingian Nonviolence Training on K-12 Educators

5 Facts About Nonviolent Schools RI’s Training (based on data from 3 schools)

1. 100% of educators report that they are willing to make personal changes that reflect the Kingian Nonviolence practice: "The Levels of Conflict made me more aware of my own levels of conflict and as a result I learned to reconcile conflicts in a more level headed way."

2. 96% of educators report that they feel confident in responding to conflicts between themselves and their students: "I really appreciate the "Beloved Community" and have a better understanding of what suspension looks like to our students...I know this has personally made me grow."

3. 80% of educators report that they feel confident when responding to conflicts between students: "Everything we were taught and discussed impacted me. This movement is something we, as people, need."

4. 68% of educators report that they feel confident when responding to conflicts between themselves and administrators: "The 6 Steps to reconcile conflict is a concrete way to deal with conflict. It lends itself to a more consistent process without much bias."

Nonviolent Schools RI’s training: "was very eye opening, I feel challenged to identify my own feelings and reactions to others and change how I respond to issues that arise personally and professionally. The training team was fantastic! This is so needed in our schools (and everywhere else) these days."