SANDBOX STORY 5 Returns to The PIT for Five-Date Run

Five random objects. Unscripted curiosity. Goofy stories revealed.

NEW YORK, NY — September 2026 — What happens when you walk into a theatre without a script, without knowing what story you're about to tell, and with nothing but five random objects?

You play. You wonder. You create.

Creator, mixed-media artist, and storyteller Gyll Star brings Sandbox Story 5 back to The PIT for a five-date run, inviting audiences into an unusual theatrical experience where the objects are the starting point and curiosity takes over.

This isn't a traditional scripted performance.

It isn't about watching a story someone else has already written.

The story is created in the room.

Five random objects become catalysts for characters, adventures, discoveries, laughter, and unexpected connections. Audience participation helps shape what happens next, while Star guides the experience and follows wherever the collective curiosity leads.

A banana might become a telephone.

A Rubik's Cube might become a rocket ship.

A simple object can suddenly become the beginning of something nobody expected.

"I wanted to create a place where people could follow their curiosity without needing to know the answer first," says Star. "The objects give us a starting point. The audience brings the curiosity."

What makes Sandbox Story 5 different is its unpredictability. No two performances can be the same, because the audience, the objects, and the stories are different every time.

And that is precisely the point.

Star has created Sandbox Story 5 as a space where people can temporarily step outside the pressure to have the right answer, the perfect idea, or a predetermined outcome—and simply discover what happens when they get curious.

It is theatre as an invitation.

Come as you are.
Follow your curiosity.
You never know where it might lead.
