

Dear Greta,

24/01/2023.

You do a lot of good work regarding some very serious climate issues & are an inspiration to millions around the world. People look up to you. The universe has blessed you with a great destiny.

Every one of us has flaws & we (should) learn each day. The wise ones learn more. I wish to draw your attention to your Twitter reply to Andrew Tate on December 28th 2022 (Please see some trail below). 99% of Twitter & the media saw the funny side of you, indirectly, mocking his manhood. However, many men get very upset & are hung up on their manhood and hate to get mocked about it.

It is the same when womens bodies & looks are being mocked. Women get upset even more its true, while men keep things bottled up inside. Some men get bitter & twisted & hence we have the evil of the incels & related poison & hatred against women. If Mr. Tate had mocked you, the world would have not seen the funny side & they would have ripped into him. As modern life is always about equality, so we must be equal & be respectful when we mock men & their most prized masculine asset. Through evolution, women have been judged & known for their beauty (& at times, brains too). This is how civilization survived through cave man times & the nomadic peoples struggling to become better.

80% of suicides are men & boys. Why is that? Does anyone care? We keep things bottled up inside too much, women love to talk! My own life had deep trauma at a young age, I also suffered abuse of various kinds. I had great mental challenges too, I nearly gave up at times but the universe kept me going & blessed me with some enlightenment. I should have died a few times given my crazy adventures with alcohol but my Guardian Angel & the universe kept blessing me. Most of us these days don't believe in the spiritual power of god & the universe because we are so obsessed with only seeing the physical realm. The secrets of life, the universe & the Creator are contained within the deep underworld of our sub-conscious. No scientist has a clue how our consciousness or thoughts come about. I digress.

Toxic masculinity is rife for various reasons. As someone who has studied psychology & human behaviour & has talked with thousands of people, I can tell you that most men & boys in the West especially, are confused about how to talk with, approach & communicate with girls & women. Parts of the internet & social media have made things worse. Our education system has gone too far the other way. Many men are bitter, angry & resentful, as are some women: There is also a thing called Toxic Feminism. Misogyny is real but so is misandry: hatred of men. Much of misandry & misogyny is unintentional as in this case.

Men & historical patriarchy are blamed for the way women have been treated throughout history. There is a lot of truth in this. It is also men who got enlightened & wise & realised the value of giving women equal rights. Yes the suffragettes had to fight for parts of it.

Yet over half the world's women around the world today don't have the same rights as men do. We should be doing more to highlight this. So many women suffer each day in Asia, Africa, Middle-East, Latin America. Does anyone really care?

Men & women are not the same. We are different biologically, physically, chemically & emotionally. We should also celebrate these differences. Common sense equality of all humans-while celebrating differences-is what we should aspire to.

I am asking you to kindly learn from this experience & say something about treating men with equal respect when it comes to mocking looks & bodies. Perhaps a follow up tweet would help.

I look forward to your reply & happy new year to you, may god & the universe bless you more.

Best Wishes,

Nat Nollid (PlanetCommonSense.Com)

Joke aside: this is misandry in action (hatred towards men). If Tate had mocked Greta's looks/boobs or genitals the world rightly say that's misogyny. Men are sensitive about their privates just as women are. This behaviour fuels incel nerds & toxic masculinity

Men are the victims of Andrew Tate's incel ideology. He propagates violent, extremist misogyny. He recruits young men to his cause by tapping into their insecurities, anger and resentment — and teaching them to debase women. Only then can you become a “real man”. He's failed men.

Mocking men's privates is just the same as mocking women's bodies. Many men are sensitive to size of their phallus etc. This misandry fuels toxic masculinity & incel nerds. If @Cobratate mocked @GretaThunberg private parts: world rightly will say misogyny. This duplicity must stop twitter.com/NatNollid/stat...

Men go through so much pain that they will never talk about it because they know that nobody cares.
