

Joni's Bio

Real estate is more than a transaction — it's a major life transition. With over a decade of experience, I've had the privilege of helping buyers and sellers navigate the process with clear communication, thoughtful strategy, and steady support from start to finish. The goal is to make your experience smoother, clearer, and less stressful from beginning to end.

Real estate has been part of my life from an early age, growing up in a family where my mother was a realtor and later both my father and brother also joined the industry. I later raised my family in Johns Creek and have sold real estate not only in Fulton County but throughout the surrounding Metro Atlanta counties, providing firsthand knowledge of the communities, neighborhoods, and market dynamics that influence successful moves.

For sellers, I focus on strategic marketing and positioning that help homes stand out and attract strong offers, often resulting in faster sales and stronger pricing. For buyers, I structure offers carefully and negotiate strategically so you have the best possible chance of securing the right home at the right value.

What matters most to me is the experience you have along the way. I believe buying or selling a home should feel supported, well-guided, and ultimately leave you in a better place than where you started.

