

THE UNAPOLOGETIC TRUTH

A new vision to reclaim our lives

A PARALLEL UNIVERSE

We are in the initial stages of the collapse of life as we know it. There is no way to stop it now. It is difficult to keep track of the barrage of events and decisions people thought would never happen in the United States. Things are accelerating, but it is all inevitable. The chickens are coming home to roost after decades of horrendous leadership and a general population that allowed itself to get mesmerized into sleep.

The signs are at every turn, especially in individuals. My wife and I are not trained therapists, but more and more of our time is spent providing therapy and comfort to people all around us who are breaking down mentally, young, and old alike. I think the fact that we have not gone through mainstream training actually makes us more affective in dealing with the reality of what is going on and what people are genuinely facing.

The most basic of tasks are becoming increasingly difficult. I have greatly enjoyed being a youth sports coach for a number of years. This past fall has been a new experience. I had to cut short multiple practices for the first time ever because of general behavior issues. I feel bad for the kids, as it is not their fault, but a rapidly growing collection of our youth have very little ability to focus in the slightest. These issues go way past COVID, but no doubt the lockdowns and onslaught of new restrictions placed on us over the past two years is going to cause serious long-term damage, especially to our youth. It is of course very difficult to quantify, but many warned of the dangers of shutting down people's lives to try and contain a constantly mutating virus.

Our mainstream society is collapsing but many are thriving. I'm not talking about the criminals in the top 1% who are enriching themselves even more off of the general suffering now taking place. I'm talking about ordinary folks who have simply walked away from mainstream thought. However, they have not simply extricated themselves from the toxic establishment stream of life but are actively creating parallel structures to be able to find personal happiness, as well as help others find their true selves and be able to exist in a separate universe within our doomed and toxic standard existence. Increasingly, it is becoming critical to have one foot in the mainstream but to maintain your other foot on the outside to preserve your happiness and sanity.

Yes, times are dark, but the time is truly right for creating a sea change for the better. A rapidly growing collection of people are joining the cause, taking great risks to create a better life in the long run for their families and communities. There is way more occurring just below the surface that the establishment is incapable of seeing and refuses to acknowledge. That is perfectly okay. As is always the case throughout history, ruling classes of corrupt establishments remain completely clueless until the very end when they are swept out to sea. Their greed and narcissism blinds them to what is really going on. Good things are building; it just takes time for parallel structures of a society to develop, but it is happening. Many are already happily living in this parallel universe and are thriving. Dark entities will increasingly collapse unto themselves, especially as growing numbers of individuals extract themselves from the false narrative. The establishment echo chambers are crumbling; still, there will be good people who will suffer over the next few years, especially as the dark entities will increasingly lash out and create more destruction as they sink on the Titanic via ever more incoherent rules, restrictions, and general chaos. Nevertheless, a massive tidal wave for the better in society is now forming just below the surface.

COLLECTIVE MADNESS: COVID AND THE MYTH OF SALVATION VIA SCIENCE

It is tough to keep track of the number of red lines and rubicons that our society has crossed in recent months. Vaccine mandates and the shaming and firing of unvaccinated individuals will clearly go down as a dark moment in our history books. We've always got to find an oversimplified and false scapegoat to manage our societal problems and insecurities, right? To deflect from the truth and not face our fears head on at all cost, no matter how many innocent people suffer as a result of the failures of mainstream thought.

This goes well beyond the single question and issue of taking the jab. If you think the government and authorities will stop with the COVID vaccine mandate you are delusional. If enough people buy into the argument and accept the idea of a vaccine mandate—which just a few short months ago our same leaders clearly said, as plain as day, that mandates could not be implemented (Biden, Pelosi, Fauci, all of them rightly stated this earlier in 2021) because it is clearly unlawful—what couldn't the government and corporate world force on us? Absolutely anything and all societal mandates beyond simple vaccines would/will become considered. If allowed to stand, the arguments that have been used to justify lockdowns and vaccine mandates, would give incentives to power centers to be able to force the general population to do anything and everything. What will stop them? Nothing if enough people capitulate and do not take a stand against vaccine mandates and the general concept of lockdowns and basic restrictions that we are now rapidly moving into the third year of existence. It has already dominated three school years. At this rate, next fall will continue to be a nightmare for many school kids, the fourth school year involving police state conditions.

Mainstream propaganda is doing everything in its power to hide these and other critical realities and instead channel all anger at unvaccinated individuals. First off, vaccinations and lockdowns will never rid the world of Covid; countries with the most extreme lockdown policies and relatively high vaccination rates are finally facing this reality. How, were supposed enlightened countries such as Australia and New Zealand allowed to get away with insane thoughts and policies such as zero tolerance for even a single case of Covid? Madness and the consequences to the general health and well-being of people, as well as the fraying of the social fabric because of these fantasy land ideas will linger for decades. Canada has been almost as bad as Australia. The US coming up close behind.

From the very beginning, it was clearly known that Covid was like the regular flu in that it would mutate too quickly to be able to be eliminated like other diseases such as polio. That is the bottom-line nature of Covid and makes comparing it to things such as polio, which can be eliminated via vaccines, like comparing apples to oranges. It is why we haven't been able to eliminate the regular flu even though we have vaccines for it. The basic nature of Covid is similar to the flu in that it mutates too quickly, and any sort of vaccine is going to be guess work at best and inevitably behind the times in terms of the virus' spread. In other words, there is no "cure" for COVID. This fact has always been known by careerist criminals such as Dr. Fauci and that policies such as "flattening the curve," mask mandates, and forced vaccinations wouldn't end the pandemic, but extend the suffering and confusion.

WHAT WILL STOP THEM FROM FORCING US TO DO ABSOLUTELY
ANYTHING THEY WANT AND TAKE ALL FREEDOMS AWAY IF THE
ARGUMENTS USED TO JUSTIFY ILLEGAL MANDATES ARE ALLOWED TO STAND? NOTHING IF ENOUGH PEOPLE CAPITULATE AND DO NOT TAKE A STAND.

In a sane world, we would be using COVID as an opportunity to make our society better via reforms such as Medicare for All. Instead, we are making things much worse across the board in terms of our health and our social fabric. This is not surprising given that our current democracy is run by a cabal of gangster criminals in the face of a general population largely paralyzed to do anything about it because of extreme fear and an inherent desire by the majority of people to follow authority figures no matter how wrong and insane their policies are. To all the biggest vaccine shamers out there, if you truly cared about the health and well-being of society and your family, you would be attacking our for-profit health care system, not scapegoating individuals. Gee, perhaps the fact that unethical government officials and corporate CEOs have been cutting the number of ICU hospital beds for years in the name of the for-profit just-in-time corporate health care model has something to do with the current shortage of hospital beds? Perhaps our corporate model of treating front-line healthcare humans like cogs in the corporate profit machine has something to do with healthcare worker burnout and shortages of critical staff? Perhaps the general culture of Western Society, especially in the United States, which worships consumerism and bottom-line profit at all cost in every segment of society and has led to the unhealthiest group of people spiritually, emotionally, mentally, and physically in the developed world has something to do with the pandemic hitting the "unhealthy to begin with" American population harder than any other country despite being the richness country on the planet? In other words, the long-term fight against COVID and the endless list of variants and new pandemics to come in the years ahead, needs to be fought at the levels of our basic health care system and the basic health of individuals as opposed to the completely surface level things such as vaccine mandates which our political class is perfectly happy to continue to hyper-focus on to further divide the general population and hide the real deeper story behind the scenes that allows them to perpetually stay in power and realize record profits. As an aside, much more focus needs to be on the bigger picture of how and why we carelessly allow COVID and COVID-related type of lab work and development to happen. Also, interesting how PhD's, are one of the biggest hold-out groups to taking the job. Hmmmm.

Even before the COVID pandemic, there was a growing push to make things such as the regular flu vaccine mandatory for everyone. It's part of the rapidly increasing rise and reliance of pumping our bodies with vaccines. The current recommended vaccine schedule for children lists 15 vaccines requiring close to 50 vaccine doses. This does not include the annual flu vaccine or the new COVID vaccines. Thus, children today are facing around 70 vaccine doses, with the number increasing rapidly, as ever more vaccines are created. As recently as the 1990s, children were subject to half as many vaccines as today.

For those who say more is never a problem and that we should never question or disobey The Science, given the trend, in a few years, you are likely see total vaccine doses approaching 100 for children. Is that still okay? What if future generations in a few decades were subject to 200 doses into their bodies. Still okay? The safety of these shots collectively are always questionable because the testing of vaccines is done in a vacuum, meaning they are not taking into consideration their safety when in conjunction with the complete collection of vaccines.

The Science is the new God for huge segments of our modern society. Science will never replace the importance of the soul. The level of hypocrisy and irony in the mainstream establishment is just too much to take. Typically, the biggest blowhards on COVID and vaccine talking points are also the biggest blowhards on equally lazy climate change talking points. As System of a Down sang in 2001, "Science has failed our Mother Earth.....Spirit moves through all things." Science allows mankind to live beyond her means. True human progress can only occur at the level of the spirit.

In the end, science and technology is neither good nor bad; they are amoral and simply reflections of our human intentions and could be used for either good or bad. The problem is that like most things, standard scientific thought has been completely taken over by greed and the power-hungry. The results are disastrous and dire. Yes, Mother Earth is on life support and mainstream, corporate-driven science and consumerism are pushing the health of our planet over the cliff. In addition, corporate driven science has led us to mass depression, massive chronic health problems, and the edge of mass species and habitat destruction. Science enabled and made things, such as the atomic bomb and episodes of genocide, easier. The solutions to our climate catastrophe and ecocide are only found in the soul. We need to develop a hatred of waste of any kind.

Declare independence and remind yourself that your goal every day is to further reclaim your life and surroundings with a convenient reminder via this forearm tattoo. Great dinner party topic and ice breaker.

For example, solar panels can play a small part in a more sustainable future if guided by the soul and small-scale thinking. However, the sad reality is that giant global corporations drive the solar panel industry just like everything else and as a result solar panels are and will actually make climate change worse. The slick marketing of solar panels is that they are this green miracle that "will save the planet," similar to other false solutions such as electric cars and giant wind farms. The reality is that the actual production of solar panels, electric cars, and wind turbines are incredibly dirty and toxic. They require an enormous amount of energy, toxic chemicals, hard-to-reach minerals from dirty mining pits, and are produced in large numbers in faraway places such as China in horrible working conditions. They also have a relatively short shelf life (but are a nightmare to try and recycle), among many other inconvenient problems. In other words, the full life cycle cost of development eliminates any sort of positive carbon gain that is achieved at just the surface and immediate level for energy generation for the user. Then, you add on the fact of the broader consumer culture. All too often, many users of mainstream "green energy" will simply use the hyper-focused individual carbon gains to then go out and build a bigger house in a more remote part of the suburbs, drive a bigger SUV, buy more things from Amazon from across the globe, and travel more, using the same if not more energy and resources than before slapping a few Chinese made solar panels on their roof. In the end, we are worse off but a few preachers of supposed green solutions to saving the planet get to feel righteous and talk holier-than-thou to the general population.

MAINSTREAM SOCIETY IS COLLAPSING
BUT MANY ARE THRIVING. I'M NOT TALKING ABOUT THE CRIMINALS IN
THE TOP 1% WHO ARE ENRICHING THEMSELVES EVEN MORE OFF OF THE
GENERAL SUFFERING NOW TAKING PLACE. I'M TALKING ABOUT
ORDINARY FOLKS WHO HAVE SIMPLY WALKED AWAY FROM MAINSTREAM THOUGHT AND ARE FINDING THEIR TRUE PURPOSE AND HAPPINESS.

Collective madness and extreme fear are the quickest way to slide into complete and total Global Totalitarianism. We are getting dangerously close to that point. Some supposedly free countries such as Australia have already flirted with that nightmare world. Another reminder that just a few short months ago, our leaders in America were rightly saying the government does not have the power to mandate the COVID vaccine. They all say it clear as day; there is endless video of it. What suddenly changed? This cannot be allowed to continue or else we will irretrievably go down a road where the notion of any sort of individual freedom and actual democracy will continue to slide into a dead-end road that leads to complete death, as there will be nothing that governments and corporations couldn't force us to do or cover up over the never-ending and generic concept of "safety." Absolutely nothing.

With irrational fear, there are two simple but critical components to overcoming it: number one is to simply acknowledge it and state it out loud repeatedly. Next, you need to face it head on. There is no other way or else it eventually consumes you. For example, if you have an irrational fear of publicly speaking, there is simply no way to overcoming it other than to force yourself into public speaking situations. It will be painful at first, but every time you do it, it slowly becomes easier and easier until that fear melts away.

Our public COVID response to-date is a betrayal of the young by old, driven by fear and insecurity, full stop. Never in my lifetime has the future and well-being of our youth been so brazenly corrupted. Outside of World War II, the level of deficit spending and debt building has never risen so dramatically and so quickly over the fatal assumption of the mainstream while we lock up our entire society to protect fear-filled parents and grandparents and of course solidify control by our global elite. Our children are going to have to somehow pay for all this unsustainable debt that has been racked up the past two years that has allowed the collective delusion and madness to continue in mainstream thought. The general mental state of our youth has been destroyed. This falls squarely on our current state of weak leadership of older generations. Youth suicide and depression were already skyrocketing even before COVID hit two years ago. Of course, our mainstream COVID response has made things infinitely worse, with a full-on assault on the souls of our youth. Our COVID policy failures and absolute refusal to tackle and address the root cause of our societal decline, including the damage to our health from COVID, will linger for decades. The weak-minded and all their lashing out from insecurities have completely taken over positions of power and standard thought.

A STREAM OF CONSCIOUSNESS: THE WAY TO LIVE

I am afraid of what lies ahead, but I will not let it consume me

I will state my fears simply to start the healing

After acknowledging I will face my fears head on

My fears will melt away, as I grow braver while placing myself in the middle of the fight

My fears will be consumed and eased when placing faith in the Spirit that guides me and I will never look back

My soul will sing and dance as I free myself from my self-imposed shackles

Those who look to feed on me and take advantage of me will now be fearful of me

Clarity will result, the future will brighten, as I become a warrior for positive change

THE ELECTION OF TONY SOPRANO (WELL, NOT QUITE IN AMESBURY)

All hail the man, the myth, the legend, Massachusetts State Representative Jim Kelcourse! There is a clear persona developed for Jim. When a constituent is at their wits end dealing with the bureaucracy and hypocrisy of the Mass. system and said person has tried everything to receive needed help to no avail, in a final act of desperation, this person calls Godfather Kelcourse who magically solves the problem instantly and saves the day.

You've got to hand it to Jim Kelcourse. He has perfected the Massachusetts political scene and is the ideal Massachusetts politician. He has perfected what the establishment has cemented in place in our state, with his giant at-a-boy slaps on the back (the universal code for join us, follow in line, and don't question things too much) and selfies at every turn. Don't blame Jim, though, as he is simply a product of our state's political system. In other words, don't hate the player, hate the game. It is ultimately enabled by us, the average people who keep electing the same brand of politician and turn a blind eye to corruption, who increasingly do not get involved, and who retreat to Facebook echo chamber groups.

Just print out and take this drawing to your favorite local tattoo artist to place on your body part of choice and impress or disgust all your friends and family. Either reaction is good.

If you are someone like Jim, or someone who thinks like him, or you are his buddy and have had some strings pulled for you, you are going to be blind and not understand why this is a dangerous form of "democracy." You don't need to travel too far down the thought train to see as easy as it is for a connected person like Jim to make a problem magically and secretly go away, it could be just as easy via this secret, behind the scenes Massachusetts political sauce to make problems and issues crop up for people who are not part of the group.

And the issue is, in a state like Massachusetts it is so easy for the old boys and girls club to hide how both important and more seemingly trivial decisions are made from the average Joe; the sucker who is not part of the "in" club and who the network is looking to perhaps suppress or punish. Furthermore, the problem is that this dominant mentality of our state is not just confined to local politics in close knit communities such as Amesbury. It spills into other important entities as well. It is in our court system in places such as the Massachusetts Family and Probate Courts where there is endless opportunities for connected lawyers, judges, GALS, etc. to work over a "problem" person who happens to be before them.

It is obvious Jim does not see a problem at all with our current system that allows a politician like him to thrive. His philosophy is to play the game and play it better. I'm sure he sincerely has never thought about all these issues and sincerely does not understand why it could be problematic. You can't take away the fact that he works extremely hard. I'm sure he is a fantastic father and husband and does lots of great charity. Still, that doesn't take away from the fact that the Massachusetts political scene is atrophied and rotten to the core.

Jim says all the right things that all standard politicians say that mean nothing. They are empty words, which they will all continue to use as long as we allow it. Although a Republican, he has perfected the game that the Mass. liberal establishment controls and is in charge of.

One of several perfect examples that every standard politician uses, is that we can lower and get our taxes under control by growing our commercial business community. This is flat out false. You cannot grow your way out of taxes. It is just empty rhetoric used forever by the entire Amesbury political establishment. Amesbury recently announced the hiring of eight new firefighters—a huge one-time increase for a community the size of Amesbury—which will have huge long-term budget implications. One of the major justifications used is the need for additional town personal and infrastructure needed to deal with the massive new hockey complex coming soon. Don't get me wrong; from a certain quality of life standpoint, the hockey arena will be fantastic. But don't kid yourself into thinking it will solve Amesbury's chronic tax problem. It will not. How do you get taxes under control? By making smart long term investment decisions and having smooth day to day operations via intelligent and fully transparent community management. Our new Woodsom Farm Elementary School is the perfect example of being anti all of the this and why Amesbury has a tax problem. Jim Kelcourse was of course fully in support of the disastrous school plan and enabled it, just like the entire town establishment, including Mayor Cassandra Gove.

If Rep. Kelcourse had successfully been elected mayor in fall 2021, nothing fundamentally would have changed in Amesbury. Jim would not have been able to lower your taxes; roads and sidewalks and infrastructure in general would still be in deplorable shape under his watch; unqualified people who happen to “know someone” would still get positions in places like the DPW; some unscrupulous landlords would still get away with taking advantage of bright eyed and unsuspecting new business owners downtown; the Lower Mill yard and downtown in general would have still been underutilized; the schools would have continued to bleed the student population; housing would have still remained unaffordable to many; he would not have been able to clear up confusions related to COVID policies, etc. etc. However, a handful of big property owners, developers, law firms, insurers, etc. would have continued to do very well.

IN MAYOR GOVE’S TWO YEARS IN CHARGE, AMESBURY TAXES FOR THE AVERAGE HOMEOWNER HAVE INCREASED BY OVER $1,100, AN ASTOUNDING LEVEL OF GROWTH.

Don’t worry, all is well. Jim is still an elected member of the Statehouse. If anyone in the region has any problem, simply call Jim and he will magically solve your problem. How does he solve problems? Don’t ask me, I live in the fantasy land of Massachusetts where things just “happen” and the less I know how decisions are actually made, the better it is for everyone involved, right? One of the most secretive statehouses in the country. This mentality trickles down everywhere. The majority of the board meetings and visioning in the state are an elaborate act to promote the idea that there is transparency, and that average people have a say in how it all happens, but much of it is a façade. Decisions are made ahead of time behind the scenes, and then everyone plays their part.

As much as people want to chide this process, this is what our system breeds. Nevertheless, a glimmer of hope as the voters of Amesbury soundly rejected Jim’s brand of empty rhetoric this fall. The general public is increasingly realizing the false narrative of being able to grow your way out of taxes that has been the center of Kelcourse’s message along with most local establishment politicians. My main challenge for Mayor Gove and the crew currently in charge in Amesbury: I will start believing in them when they start seriously calling out power players in the Democratic Party, which controls the state.

Still, just because votes rejected Rep. Kelcourse’s empty solutions to lower our taxes doesn’t mean taxes are not a major issue in Amesbury. In fact, Mayor Gove has a lot to answer for regarding her performance. In the two years she has been in power, Amesbury taxes for the average single-family homeowner have increased by over $1,100 from $6,919 to $8,033, an astounding level of growth. That works out to an annual increase of $557. The two-year increase on a percentage basis is a growth rate of 16.1%, which is wholly unsustainable and a punishing level of tax growth for taxpayers. In the 32 years previous that the Massa. Dept of Revenue has easily accessible data for, the average annual tax increase had been $169.

Apologists often run to the argument that home values are rising strongly. This is absolutely true but even here the argument fails significantly as according to the same Mass DOR data source, average home values increased by 12.8% in her two years vs. the 16.1% tax level increase. We all know that the ultra-hot housing market will not last, as there will be a crash at some point as there always is (but that is for another article), but tax increases will continue to rise, you can bet on that especially given the mentality of the current regime in charge of Amesbury.

Finally, out of the 351 communities reporting in Massachusetts, Amesbury’s average tax rate ranking rose from 105 in 2020 to 62 in fiscal year 2022. That is an unbelievable rise in ranking, as it is very rare for a community to change rankings by more than a small handful of slots from one year to the next. In other words, in two years under Kassandra Gove, our tax rate ranking leap frogged 43 other communities.

Given our tax performance plus other long-standing questionable operations in town, it is long past time for a full audit of city finances and operations. This includes an in-depth report from an outside, neutral party about exactly how the new Woodsom Farm school plan played out for it would be the only way to bring true healing to the community. For example, a performance audit should investigate and answer who knew exactly what in terms of financing that was actually available for a renovation of the existing Amesbury Elementary school location that was hidden from the public. This needs a full vetting.

NO COUNTRY FOR OLD THINKING

Fantasy Land is burning down. Like the ominous tone of the classic movie No Country For Old Men, a dark force has arrived in town and has zero empathy for our well-being. Our old style of thinking is no match for this force. This dark force that is now relentlessly pursuing us represents the agonizing and suffering of an infinite number of souls in the world and through history our collective denialism of what our consumerist society has brought upon people, animals, and life on earth.

Every major problem our society faces: from ecological destruction; to animal extinction; to COVID and our broader health problems; to suicide; to record income inequality and wealth gap; to court-driven injustices; everything traces its roots back to collectively burying our heads in the sand on the consequences of our mass produced consumer driven society and our collective society's absolute refusal to take any responsibility for allowing money, profit, and the constant need for validation and "bigness" to rule everything.

We have reached a tipping point. There is no stopping a massive upheaval to our world that is still in the very early stages of developing. Inflation has returned in a big way, returning to 1970s style price increases. It is tough to keep track of the number of basic materials that have skyrocketed to all time elevated levels. Now, global natural gas prices have risen to levels never seen before. Crude oil is shooting higher as well. Heating could become a nightmare this winter for many. Basic utility bills combined with tax and mortgage payments in a town like Amesbury, MA that has seen average homeowner property taxes increase by over $1,100 in just the last two years—I don't know how an increasing number of families and households are going to survive. How can the vast majority of people keep up with that level of pricing growth for basic goods? Wait until all the stimulus money begins to dry out, we couldn't expect that to go on forever. However, as this newsletter has repeatedly discussed, stimulus is the only thing keeping the whole shithouse together, as the economy already collapsed back during the Great Recession. Basically, the entire American economy and almost every single industry is completely reliant on massive government stimulus and ultra-low interest rates. Without these policies, our economy would not survive, and we would be in Great Depression-level conditions. The problem is that, inevitably our national debt has ballooned to an extreme level that we never thought we would get to so rapidly. At the close of 2021, our national debt now stands at $30 Trillion! Just four years earlier, it was around $20 Trillion, which is still a mindboggling number. The biggest concern is the trajectory. As discussed in Issue #5 of this newsletter, America's debt-to-GDP ratio has gone from 30th in the world as recently as 2017 to the top ten now out of 200 or so countries in the world. This is very dangerous for the world's reserve currency. The bottom line is that massive deficit spending is the only thing keeping our economy and thus society, from further collapse, with no solutions in sight. Now, even with all this money and the vaccine rollout, employment growth has been disappointing. Despite record job openings, the workforce participation rate is plunging. People are leaving the workforce in droves. This is for a combination of reasons: mental health breakdowns; physical health breakdowns; the need for basic child support as our public schooling system is collapsing where people are reaching a breaking point with new corporate minded curriculum standards and border-line child abuse with masks all day long for even children as young as 2 and 3.

THE PARALLEL UNIVERSE PROMOTES MOVING TOWARD A MUCH MORE DIRECT FORM OF DEMOCRACY.

Only in a sick and twisted society could so many so-called "leaders" and people with mainstream thought, declare victory over things such as company vaccination rates increasing because those unwilling to get vaccinated have left or been fired, which artificially prop up these vaccination rates of a company. Only a stereotypical, head-driven person with no ability to see the bigger picture, could think that pushing more people out of the already hemorrhaging workforce is a good thing because of the hyper-focus on vaccination rates.

Gee, you scare people to death about COVID, combined with layers of insane rules and regulations, plus vaccine mandates, on top of the corporate-driven big brother monitoring of workers where they are treated like cogs in the top 1% global profit machine and you wonder why, and you now complain about not enough people willing to work in the traditional workforce? Of course, from my perspective, people leaving the traditional workplace is part of the positive and necessary, but admittedly painful transition of our economy and lifestyle.

Supply chain backlogs will not be cleared up anytime soon. They are as bad as they have ever been, with giant cargo ships just hanging out in the waters of ports for weeks and rail deliveries are stockpiled. Massive shortages of truck and bus drivers (did we ever think we'd see the day when we needed to have military personnel drive our kids to school? Hey, we may as well start getting the population slowly ready for a constant state of the military roaming our streets.

It is, in a lot of ways, anarchy out there. Nobody is in charge. Murder rates for example are skyrocketing, reversing a lengthy period of decline. Can anyone with a straight face say that the White House is actually in charge? It seems obvious that some sort of combination of the NSA, The Pentagon, the Justice Department, and CIA are the true leaders of our government. It is alarming how quickly all of these big developments are happening.

With all of this going on, it should be clear that old style tactics to run our society is a joke to Javier Bardem. Traditional ways of fighting back are like a fly on his ass. In other words, traditional politics are dead. Good riddance. There are endless better ways to make a positive difference in our world and in our political landscape than getting sucked into the absolute dead end of traditional establishment liberal (Democratic Party) vs establishment conservative (Republican Party) politics. If we want any chance of creating a better future for our kids, people need to continue to rapidly withdraw and leave both political camps. Increasingly gray rock (ignore and don't be bothered by their gaslighting). But of course, this is only one key step, withdrawing and calling out both corrupt parties. We then need to massively go on the positive offensive, building everything from the ground up in terms of political movements, but not necessarily worrying about building new official political parties, as the game is beyond rigged to get on the ballots as an independent party. We need to hyper-focus on small-scale capitalism at the local level for example.

Still, one of the most fundamental facts of the universe as stated by Sir Issac Newton is that every action has an equal and opposite reaction. In other words, yes, we are seeing huge, ominous clouds rapidly developing, but there is also a tremendous amount of light, breakthroughs, and good forces being created as a direct response. These positive forces are mainly out of site, mainly in the underground. In fact, much of it is developing within individuals wanting for a healthy outlet. Those healthy outlets are building into parallel structures. A secondary society and economy is growing both in plain sight and hidden. It will continue to grow, living both within and completely outside mainstream society until one day people will turn around and suddenly realize it has become the default way of living. Establishment society as we know it will sort of magically disappear likely quite quietly. However, corrupt leaders will not go down quietly, as they increasingly get exposed.

These parallel structures within a parallel universe will include ways to make a living and have basic necessities met such as food, clothing, and shelter. It begins with a change in mindset. At some point you simply walk away, learning when to call out the system and fight it head-on and when to sit back more, build up your skills, happiness, inflate your soul and essentially levitate above the two- and three-dimensional sadness of establishment thinking. The parallel universe encourages moving beyond a purely representative form of democracy to a much more direct form of democracy, resulting in things such as collective ownership of new societal structures by the people: think leaderless political movements; worker cooperatives; etc.

People will increasingly walk away from the traditional concept of political parties. The game is so rigged by the Democrats and Republicans it is simply a waste of time.

Raising a flock is a great activity for you mental, physical, and spiritual well-being. No town should have bans in place.

Despite the rain clouds and Javier Bardem, the future is bright. Unfortunately, Javier will take down more good people and that is just the nature of his unexplainable evil. Still, he will be encouraged to move along to another land once the old guard has been swept out by a rapidly awakening general population who are starting to figure out a new way of living: L-I-V-I-N. There is a growing collection of trail blazers who are clearing the brush and making it safer for others to follow a new path.

Like the movie suggests, things are moving quickly beyond the capabilities of old style of thinking. What is required of us is to move our faith away from representative democracy (which requires a somewhat functioning system) to a much more direct form of democracy, which includes setting up parallel structures of power, organizations, and systems of commerce for those determined not to live completely in a world of illusion because of immense fear and need to conform.

This need will increasingly become a matter of basic survival for a huge segment of society. We need to move towards hyper local community development, which will progressively become not an issue of policy choice in the coming years, but an issue of basic survival—local food networks will be absolutely critical—because of disease, economic collapse, climate change, etc. COVID is way down the list of biggest problems we face.. Best to get ahead of the worst of it and build up local infrastructure as much as possible before the inevitable full breakdown of our status quo globalist economic society.
