PAYMENT, FINANCING, AND FUNDING

For funerals that are being arranged at the time of need, unless otherwise specified, a deposit will be required at the time the contract is signed, or before the date of the funeral. The balance of the account is due within 30 days of the signing of the contract. Payment may be made by cash, cheque, E-Transfer, Visa or Mastercard. Beyond the allotted time, interest will be charged at a compounded rate of 1.33% per month on the unpaid balance, which is equivalent to 16% per annum (APR).

For funerals that are being arranged pre-need, we offer two funding options when prepaying services or supplies. When prepaying, you pay for the services and supplies today, and the money will be used to pay for the services and supplies when they are delivered at the time of death.

Trust: Payment is made directly to the Trust company, where it will accrue interest until the contract is fulfilled (when the services and supplies are delivered) or the contract is cancelled. Payment can be made by cheque or credit card (2.5% credit card processing fee will apply)

Insurance: You may purchase an insurance product through us where the proceeds of the insurance policy will be used to pay for the services or supplies at the time they are delivered or the contract is cancelled. Payment may be made by cheque for single payments. Time payments may be made by credit card or direct withdrawal.

Our History

Newcastle Funeral Home is a historic building in Newcastle, Ontario. Originally it was the home of Mr. Thomas Montague, who was one of Newcastle's most prominent and generous citizens. Thomas Montague was born in 1845 in London, England. He passed away in 1928. Rev. Scott Howard, his wife Clara and their two children also lived in the house with Montague. Rev. Howard died in 1939 in his 83rd year. Mrs. Howard stayed in the home until prior to her death in 1952. Shortly after, it became the South Haven Rest Home, which eventually went into bankruptcy, leaving the once beautiful home empty for a number of years.

In the fall of 1995, Carl Good and his wife Joyce Kufra purchased the property. They began an extensive restoration of the home and opened as Newcastle Funeral Home in 1996.

In 2012, Carl and Joyce sold the business to Trevor Charbonneau. Trevor is a licensed funeral director who is originally from a small town in Northern Ontario. Trevor started his career as a funeral director at Rosar-Morrison Funeral Home in Toronto in the year 2000. He eventually became the Assistant Manager there. In 2006, he was promoted to Manager of Jerrett Funeral Home in Scarborough.

In 2017, an area of the funeral home was renovated and Newcastle Funeral Home became the first provider of Aquamation in the area. Because of the growing demand for Aquamation, another facility was established in Whitby for Aquamation in 2023.

Newcastle Funeral Home remains Clarington's only local, family owned and operated funeral home.

What Is Aquamation?

Aquamation is a method of disposition that uses a combination of water flow, temperature and alkalinity to breakdown the body. At the conclusion of the process, the bones survive and are reduced to a powdery consistency and returned to the family for keepsakes, internment or scattering. The scientific name for this process is alkaline hydrolysis.

Frequently Asked Questions

Aquamation is a method of final disposition that is available for both our human and pet loved ones. The scientific name for this water-based process is alkaline hydrolysis. It is the same process that occurs as part of nature's course when a body is laid to rest in the soil. A combination of water flow, temperature, and alkalinity are used to accelerate the breakdown of organic materials.

Does the Family Receive an Urn?

Yes, at the end of the process, the inorganic remains of the body (the calcium phosphate of the bones) resemble skeletal remains. In North America and other parts of the world, it's customary to process the minerals into a powder for placement in an urn.

Can the Family Still Have a Viewing?

Of course, and in fact many families choose to have a full-service visitation for family and friends prior to the Aquamation process.

Can the Body be Embalmed?

Yes, this is a choice that is in the hands of the individual or family. All embalming fluids are completely broken down in the process.

Is a Casket Required?

No, these materials will not break down in the Aquamation process, nor will clothing unless it is protein-based (silk, wool, or leather).

How Long Does the Process Take?

The process takes 6-8 hours, or 14-18 hours depending on the operating temperature of the equipment.

What Actually Happens During the Process?

The Aquamation process is performed after any viewing or visitation services the family wishes to have. When it's time for the process, the individual body is respectfully placed in a stainless steel vessel. Alkali is added to the process based on individual characteristics (weight, sex, embalming status), and the vessel fills with water. The solution of 95% water and 5% alkali is heated to 200-300°F, and gently circulated for the entire length of the process.

At the end of the process, all material is broken down to the smallest building blocks; there is no DNA or RNA remaining. The sterile process water is released for recycling (our bodies are approximately 65% water to begin with), and the vessel performs a fresh water rinse for the equipment and remains. When the operator opens the door, the inorganic bone minerals remain. These minerals are processed into powder and returned to the family in an urn. Many families hold a celebration of life or gathering when the loved one's remains are returned to the family's care.

Can the Family Still Have a Memorial Service After the Process?

Yes. Many families choose to have a memorial service or celebration of life to honour the life of their loved one and gather with friends and family.

Are the Remains Safe to Handle?

Yes, the remains are 100% safe to handle, pathogen and disease free. Alkaline hydrolysis is a proven sterilization process.

What Can be Done with the Remains?

Some families bury the urn in a cemetery, or permanently inter the urn in a columbarium/niche. There are numerous memorial products that can be made with the remains – hand blown glass memorials, ceramic art pieces, man-made diamonds, memorial plantings for your garden, and many more. Many families choose to scatter some or all of the remains in a special place.

Are there any Special Considerations for Spreading the Remains?

Please check local regulations to make sure the scattering location is okay prior to scattering, and speak with us about the best way to scatter the remains so your experience can be as meaningful as possible. Some special care must be taken when spreading the remains in wind or water, as the remains are quite fine.

Will I Need a Larger Urn?

Sometimes a larger urn is needed due to the increased volume of remains, but this varies for each individual case. We have many urns that will accommodate the remains from Aquamation.

What is the Impact of Water Usage?

Very low. The Aquamation process uses less water than a single household uses in one day (source: water.usgs.gov). This includes all of the water used for the process, along with the clean water rinsing of the final remains and vessel.

What Happens to the Water?

The water is returned to the ecosystem via the normal wastewater treatment facility, just as all funeral homes in Canada and the United States, do during the embalming process.

The Aquamation process produces a completely sterile solution of amino acids, sugars, nutrients, salts, and soap in a water solution. These are the byproducts of natural decomposition.

Does the Process Emit Mercury in to the Air?

No. Mercury vaporizes at 674.1°F, and alkaline hydrolysis uses much lower temperatures of 200-300°F. Release of mercury from fillings to the environment is completely prevented.

What Happens to Medical Implants?

Medical implants are not destroyed in this process. The metals are clean, sterile, and look brand new after the process. These metals are recycled through a metal refiner to be made into new materials.

How Long has the Process Been Around?

The modern technology has been in use by universities and the scientific industries for decades! It has been used for the final disposition of human bodies donated to medical science since 1995. The first pet facility was opened in 2007, and the first funeral home to use the technology was in 2011.

What is the Science Behind the Process?

A commonly misunderstood fact is that it is actually the water that performs the breakdown during the Aquamation process, not the alkali.

A hydrolysis reaction is any type of reaction where bonds are cleaved by the insertion of water molecules. With alkaline hydrolysis, a base is added to water to create an alkaline environment. This changes the behaviour of the water molecules, causing them to dissociate into hydrogen and hydroxide ions. The solution is only 5% alkali; 95% is water. Equally important to the process are the physical characteristics of the system (design), the continuous flow of the solution, and the heat. This all relates to collision theory and the rate and completeness of a reaction.

What happens in the process is Our bodies are 65% water to being with, along with fat, protein, minerals, and carbohydrates. During the process, fats are reduced to salts, protein to amino acids and small peptides (which are groups of a few amino acids), and carbs are reduced to sugars. The process breaks all organic materials into their most basic building blocks, so small that no trace of protein or nucleic acids (DNA/RNA) remain. The organics are dissolved into the water, which consists of 96% water and 4% amino acids, sugars, and salts by weight.
