CWU Athletics Camp COVID-19 Protocols

Spring & Summer 2022

Protocols and Policies for Camp Participants

Participants in CWU Athletic Camps must adhere to all University COVID protocols and policies. As a university, our primary responsibility is the health and safety of our campers and staff members. The policies outlined in this document are developed under the current environment and it is understood that circumstances regarding COVID may change and stricter protocols and policies can be implemented with little or no advance warning.

Vaccinations and Masking/Face Coverings: As it currently stands, neither vaccinations nor masking/face coverings are required. Although Central Washington University strongly encourages individuals to get vaccinated to protect themselves and others from the harmful effects of COVID, they are not required. Masking/face coverings are also encouraged for those who want an extra layer of protection while participating or facilitating camp-related functions, but not required except in our Campus Health Center per the State of Washington.

Daily Self-Assessment: All camp participants are encouraged to do a daily self-assessment to determine if they are experiencing any COVID-related symptoms. Should an individual become symptomatic, it is their responsibility to immediately report their symptoms with a camp administrator and/or their coach if it is a team camp.

Symptomatic Participant: Any camp participant experiencing COVID-related symptoms will be isolated and asked to leave camp. Parents/coaches will be responsible for the transport of symptomatic campers back home. Any symptomatic camper is encouraged to test for COVID-19 and follow all precautions to minimize the spread.

Resident camps will need to work with Conference Service and athletics to designate a space/room to isolate and hold symptomatic participants while they wait for transport.

Team Camps: Three (3) or more symptomatic participants from one group/team with 20 or less participants and five (5) or more from one group/team with more than 21 participants will require the whole team to stop their participation in camp.

Note: These protocols can be adjusted by the University Leadership to reflect the needs of our campus.
