

The Piggy Banks of Common Sense Speak: To College Degree Seekers and those Who Are Eager to Support Them..

To the Student:

- Many of life's most worthy and lucrative careers require a college degree.
- But costs are too high to make a casual decision that turns out to be wrong.
- So be sure your goals are clear. That you meet the requirements. That you are truly committed.
- Then seek every avenue that helps you minimize student debt. (That's the big pig in the pic.).
  - Talk to your family and your extended family. Be willing to work part time jobs.
  - And seek to discover and earn EVERY available avenue to debt-free dollars
- There are grants, scholarships apprenticeships, and others: Seek help from your counselors. Leave no stone unturned. It's hard work, but the rest of the journey is hard work, too.

To Supporters of College Degree Seekers

We understand that skyrocketing college costs were almost stunning.

The sense that their isn't nearly enough that you can do.

It is true that much more is needed. You may need to dig deeper.

but you don't have to fill the whole gap... others can be motivated to help.

To Guidance Counselors

For many reasons, you are the most important player in this game (and it is competitive). Learn everything you can about the resources. Use Artificial Intelligence as a research tool. You can make an enormous difference in the next step of their lives, during difficult times.
