Modern Slavery Statement

Introduction

This statement is made pursuant to section 54 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 (the "MSA") on behalf of Would You Balloon It?

We remain sensitive to the risk of modern slavery in our supply chains. We are committed to acting responsibly and with integrity in all our business relationships and continue to take measures to implement and enforce effective systems and processes to ensure that modern slavery and human trafficking is not taking place anywhere within our control or influence.

Our business

Would You Balloon It? Is a specialist balloon artist company providing displays to both personal and personal customers. We pride ourselves in using a network of suppliers that are commit to the principles of the Modern Slavery Act.

We have a creative and open working environment for our small team that is inclusive, supportive, and based on mutual respect and trust and where everyone feels valued. Our ambition is for our employees to enjoy a working environment that is free from discrimination, harassment, bullying and victimisation.

Our supply chains

Our supply chains include a range of suppliers for our products. We operate zero tolerance to slavery and human trafficking within our business. We expect all those in our supply chains to comply with our values. We expect all suppliers to have suitable anti-slavery and human trafficking policies and processes in place. We acknowledge our responsibility to be alert to the risks of modern slavery and human trafficking in our supply chains. We consider the risks in our current supply chains to be low, based on the location of our suppliers and product/service categories that we purchase. Nevertheless, we continue to monitor and develop our responsibilities in this regard, as appropriate.

Conclusion

We are committed to the continuous improvement of our knowledge and efforts in eradicating modern slavery.
