THE TAPES WE LEFT BEHIND....

In the 1980s, Master tapes were created from the multitrack masters for the manufacture and release of CDs .

These are those Master tapes

They are a piece of our musical history likely to not be repeated and many are one-offs.

Now obsolete, due to defunct machines and decay they have been recycled from their sonic brilliance into a visual representation of the past.

Will you now be responsible for owning that history?.....

Using and recycling defunct and discarded relics, artefacts and pieces of history from our past culture and bringing them to life to serve a new purpose has been an overriding passion that compels me to create.

This started way back over 50 years ago but now, with no other bracket or label I call it "possessionism" in Art.

The Lennon Wired exhibition, with more than 50% of the artwork consisting solely of Lennon's discarded microphone leads was a pinnacle that it had been heading in for decades but now with "The Tapes We Left Behind" I continue to save these items and create a visual reminder from a once-sonic masterpiece.

This exhibition has a huge variety of subjects and genres but outside of the fact they are all master tapes they are collectively some of the greatest names in the music business and I hope these tapes, left to be disposed of, have a new life.

POP NOUVEAU AT STRAWBERRY FIELD

LENNON WIRED

In 2020 Artist James Wilkinson created 11 pieces of art using the original microphone leads that John Lennon Used to record his seminal album and single 'Imagine'. Destined to be exhibited on the 50th anniversary year, Pop Nouveau Gallery was offered exhibition space for the Lennon Wired Exhibition in various destinations around the world. One of those spaces was Lennon's childhood sanctuary, Strawberry Field in Liverpool, the inspiration for the Beatles double A side. Single Strawberry Fields/Penny Lane.

In April 2021 the exhibition was launched by John Lennon's sister Julia Baird and attended by various Beatles aficionados including the original surviving members of the Quarrymen.

The exhibition joined the Imagine Piano which has been loaned to Strawberry Field by George Michael's Estate and was expected to stay at Strawberry field for 6 months but due to the popularity and success of the exhibition, the installation was extended by another year until the end of September 2023.

The gallery is now talking to destinations worldwide to take the exhibition on a tour of peace around the UK and the world.

In 2018 Cliff Cooper, CEO of Orange Amplifiers, contacted James Wilkinson with an idea to create a bandstand for Strawberry Field as a donation to the Salvation Army who had helped his father after the first World War . The bandstand would be the most hi-tech bandstand ever built and James was commissioned to produce the artwork for the roof, the back of the stage and the outside.

The bandstand design by Mick Dines, was based on the Sgt Pepper drum and so James made his preliminary sketches and designs in 2018 which were initially approved. In 2021 the bandstand build was approved by all parties and the artwork began in earnest. many proofs were created and rejected until the final images were unanimously approved and the installation began in May 2022 in time for a soft opening and then a formal hand-over on September 2023.

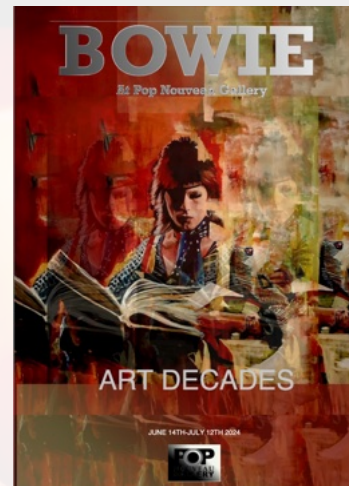

The back of stage mural is an impressive 8.5M x3M with the roof design 8M diameter and the 4 outside images each 1m diameter.

Proof artwork is still available for this project exclusively at Pop Nouveau Gallery.
