Stacey Thacker founded Art Totality, LLC in April of 2009 because of her love for the arts, family, friends and community. Since Stacey was very little she has had an interest and passion for the arts; drawing, theater, dance, and poetry to mention a few. Even though her career path ended up taking a different route, she continued to learn the different art platforms. She could never pick just one, that is why "Totality" is part of the name.

With Art Totality, she found a way to integrate her degrees with her art passions. At Indiana State University (ISU) Stacey received her BS degree in psychology and her MS degree in Human Resource Development. Stacey designs and facilitates the artwork projects by utilizing her degree knowledge and work experience as an instructional designer.

Stacey's focus is on green artwork projects because of her desire to play a part in protecting the environment. In many cases there are masterpieces lingering around the house that would otherwise go in the trash. The years of working with ISU Recycling Center on artwork projects has taught Stacey how cost effective the green endeavor really is. The green approach to artwork projects is a way to decimate that collected knowledge and to continue to make a difference in protecting mother earth.

Group artwork projects for families/friends is another technique that Stacey specializes in. Over the 15 plus years working with teams, she has watched ideas evolve in the group setting. This approach is far superior to independent work when it comes to learning something new. Plus working with those you enjoy being around makes the project fun and memorable. It is a memory that will last a lifetime, the masterpiece is the reminder of the moment.

Essentially, Art Totality is about spending precious time with people you love while creating green artwork projects. The completed masterpiece is the added bonus.

Currently Stacey is working on "green" virtual artwork tutorials that include a 3 step process. Each project will consist of an instructional video, written instructions and a live demo with questions and answers. We hope you will join us!
