What Goes into Our Contents Cleaning Process?

Depending on the type of event (fire, water leak, flood, etc.) your property has suffered, as well as the extent of the damage, our team is able to conduct either on-site or off-site contents cleaning. When damaged items must be moved off-site, we follow a proven process that allows us to quickly and effectively restore most damaged contents and return them promptly to your home or place of business.

This process typically involves the following steps:

- First, our team will conduct a thorough inventory of the damaged contents, noting the types of items and the extent of the damage.
- Next, we will carefully pack out all your belongings and move them to our state-of-the-art, climate-controlled facility.

- Once your belongings reach our facility, we enact a restoration plan that focuses on cleaning and restoring high-priority items first, followed by lower-priority items.
- Throughout the process, we document everything we do, as well as the items that are cleaned and restored and those that cannot be salvaged.
- Our team will provide documentation of non-restorable items to your insurance provider in order to assist you in the claims process.
- Once everything has been cleaned, restored, and fully deodorized, our team will carefully return all items to your home, following the same inventory procedures.

We are equipped to clean and restore all types of residential and commercial contents, ranging from furniture to upholstery to cabinetry to sensitive workplace materials. Our team utilizes advanced cleaning and restoration methods, such as specialized drying chambers, immersion and ultrasonic cleaning, ozone treatments, and odor treatment.
