My Optimistic Future

I will change the world by… reversing climate change. Creating a way to limit our carbon emissions and cool back down the earth. By creating sustainable change for generations, ensuring the future for our grandkids. By erasing the hundreds of years of damage that has been laid. By changing the way we view and take care of our earth.

I will change the world by… curing the disease that has claimed too many of us. By eliminating the pain of losing someone to cancer from future generations. By helping to reinvent the way we see that diagnosis. By creating relief in those words and shaping the future of the human race.

I will change the world by… bringing back extinct species. By reinstating the creatures we have only ever seen as bones. So that dinosaurs and mammoths can be the sights our kids capture. Keeping Hawaiian history, and the plants and animals they love so much, alive.

I will change the world by… ending the idea of racism. By opening peoples eyes to  the possibility of no longer being defined by the color of their skin or the shape of their eyes. By allowing people to be the way they are without labels and expectations and stereotypes. By creating a truly equal world.

I will change the world by… eliminating the ideal of perfection. By not having teenagers think they need to be perfect to fit in. By not having schools and their grading systems teach you that you can't fail. By allowing people to be themselves and make mistakes sometimes. By letting us be human.

I will change the world by … opening peoples eyes and ears to new experiences. By allowing people to listen to others ideas. By allowing them to see what other people go through. By making people more empathetic through understanding.

I will change the world by… creating world peace. Where people don't need to live in fear. Where everyone can communicate peacefully and get along. Where WWIII isn't a possibility and no one needs to risk their life for their country ever again.
