Pick a Number Round Robin Format:

In the "pick a number" round robin format, each player within the bracket (Beginner, Intermediate, Advanced) is randomly assigned a number. A chart will identify the court you will be playing on, your partner and your opponents for each round.

Each player is "on their own" and will generally play with a new partner and against new opponents each round.

Each player will play 6 rounds. Each round will be played to 11 and you must win by 1 point. Each round will take approximately 15-17 minutes to complete.

The winning player is chosen based on win-loss records. If there is a tie, then the tie is broken by point differential (to note, point differential means the numerical gap between points scored and points allowed). If a tie remains after point differential, then the tie is broken by head-to-head point differential (in other words, the point differential based only on those games (if any) where the tying players played against one another). If there is still a tie, then the final tie breaker is by point differential against the next-highest player.
