Guadalupe-Blanco River Trust selected for National Park Service Assistance on Plum Creek Wetlands Preserve Master Plan initiative

Seguin, TX – Today, the National Park Service (NPS) Rivers, Trails and Conservation Assistance Program (RTCA) announced the selection of the Guadalupe-Blanco River Trust's Plum Creek Wetlands Preserve Master Plan initiative to receive outdoor recreation planning assistance. The Trust was selected through a competitive process and will receive support to help make outdoor recreation and conservation spaces vital, life-enhancing parts of their community. NPS assists these efforts by pairing our network of professional landscape architects and community planners with communities to achieve on-the-ground successes.

The proposal for the Plum Creek Wetlands Preserve is to establish an organization plan, marketing plan, and master plan for 265-acres of property to serve as an educational nature center inclusive of public trail paths. When completed the project will conserve local water quality through responsible management of wetlands, protect wildlife habitat and promote an appreciation of the natural world through meaningful educational, recreational, and research opportunities for the public.
