Carla Felten is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker with Kinship Center, a member of Seneca Family of Agencies. She has worked in the placement program for five years, offering support to resources families during their foster care and adoption journeys. Besides seeing children thrive and heal in their families, one of Carla's favorite roles is providing education and developing training curriculum to resource families and child/family treatment professionals. Previously she has worked in Los Angeles County, Colorado, and North Carolina as a child welfare worker and offered in-home support to children and families impacted by trauma. In between all that, Carla enjoys traveling, expanding her cultural cuisine resume (aka loves food), and playing music.

This training will offer an understanding of how trauma and loss impact brain development and attachment in children and how to utilize trauma-informed, attachment-focused parenting strategies to help them heal. These techniques are different from traditional parenting approaches with children who are securely attached, and are best implemented with self-reflection, empathetic support, awareness of cultural differences, and resolution of a parent's own trauma history. This training seeks to further equip the knowledge treatment professionals have with children's difficult beginnings to help empower the caregivers who are the active agents of healing and growth for the children they are parenting.
