Youth often struggle with balancing the demands of their indigenous culture and the expectations of the surrounding dominant culture. This is especially true for youth of color in out-of-home placement. This struggle can manifest itself in various behavioral health and health disorders which places them at further risk of failing to succeed as participants in their community or pursuing their own dreams and goals.

This workshop will explore the elements of resilience at a micro-, mezzo-, and macro-level through focus on the 40 developmental assets, and achievement of bicultural competence. Grounded in extensive research in youth development, resiliency, and prevention, the Developmental Assets represent the relationships, opportunities, and personal qualities that young people need to avoid risks and to thrive. Studies of more than 2.2 million young people in the United States consistently show that the more assets young people have, the less likely they are to engage in a wide range of high-risk behaviors and the more likely they are to thrive.

Strategies and interventions with youth and families in a variety of settings aimed at promoting cultural and spiritual pathways towards health and wellness will be discussed.

This course qualifies for 3 hours of continuing education. Continuing education (CE) hours are available to maintain the following licenses with the Board of Behavioral Sciences (BBS): Marriage and Family Therapists, Licensed Clinical Social Workers, and Licensed Professional Clinical Counselors.
