Saturday, May 18 Master Gardener Pam Cooley

Above: A bluebird perches on a decorative woodpecker birdhouse. Right: Wood saytrs generally fly near the ground, twisting between and through grasses, small trees and bushes.

The BFCC group of gardeners showed up with questions for Pam who so graciously showed up on a Saturday night for the BFCCs monthly event. She talked about our most common noxious weeds and plants that will grow and prosper at our altitude and semi-arid conditions. After hearing of our frustrations with the vole/pocket gopher situation and how we are drawn to deal with it, she declared us an Elmer Fudd group even though it is all fantasy.

Maybe... Something else that caught my attention in one of the books was this cute birdhouse that some of you woodworkers might like to try out.

Members related their successes and how their greenhouses gave them head-starts with our difficult gardening weather.

Pam had a great group of books to pass around and websites to peruse.

Since the BFCC runs on volunteers, Mack Sharp, former BFCC president and director, stepped up to freshen the doors of the hall. He found a great deal on paint at Pikes Peak Habitat for Humanity. After the logs were re-stained last fall, the painted doors showed the wear and tear of years. Winter's cooler temperatures caused the painting to be postponed until warmer weather. Great job, Mack and Tango.

Jim Collins, Board Member, also did a great job with the four thermostats to the furnaces hanging in each corner. He found that the batteries were not being monitored and has put that on a schedule to check and keep the furnaces running as needed.

NEW ON THE BFCC WEBSITE

A new feature has been added to the BFCommunityclub.org website:

"Classes," which comprises a catalog of courses accessible to all interested individuals. Please take a moment to peruse this section. It includes two distinct exercise classes, music sessions tailored for young children, and a self-protection course. Additionally, there are three opportunities for participation in Scout activities listed. We encourage you to explore these offerings; you may discover something that piques your interest.

STATUS UPDATE: BACKYARD PLANNING PROJECT

BFCC President Leif Garrison had a productive on-site meeting last week with Landscape Architect Kristin Heggem and Surveyor James Brinkman to review and fine-tune the topographical survey of the Backyard area that Mr. Brinkman is in the process of preparing. The participants walked the entire property and reviewed the challenging topography of the site as well as the existing native and transplanted trees and vegetation. Also assessed and discussed were the various structures that have accumulated on the property over the years, as well as the chronic drainage-related issues including the wet/cattail area and related “ditch,” the challenges presented by the near-constant driveway erosion, and the badly eroded drainage outflow area on the north side of the property.

Mr. Brinkman presented an initial rough draft of the survey to Heggem and Garrison, and he and Ms. Heggem agreed to various updates and improvements to be made to the final version, which should be ready in the next few weeks. Once she has received the final survey map, Ms. Heggen is expected to consult with Leif about the need for and contents of an initial bid/scope of work for review and potential approval by the BFCC Board and Officers.

History is not there for you to like or dislike.
It Is there for you to learn from.
If it offends you, even better,
Because then you are less likely to repeat it.

It's not yours to erase.
It belongs to all of us.

Got a Grouchy Lawnmower? This may be your Solution.

Our new board member, Jim Collins, heard that our BFCC lawnmower was on its last legs. That lawnmower had been donated over 10 years ago by Bill Buckman. Jim's neighbor, James Clary, has a small engine repair and service business here in the Forest. He pronounced our old mower DOA but came up with a self-propelled Husqvarna that he donated to the BFCC. It has new drive wheels, sharpened blade and new drive cable, all at no charge to the Club.

Thank you to Jim Collins for being resourceful AND thank you to James Clary for being so generous.

James Clary is a Black Forest native and starting his own business and obviously community oriented. So next time your machine doesn't even growl at you, think:
