“I have never had an experience at any of the Schools of Banking that was less than outstanding. They offer a curriculum that focuses on what your experience level is, and the subject matter is relevant to what is going on in the industry today. I’ve had the opportunity to attend four schools, and my experiences there have been a huge part of my career development. I think the Schools of Banking has something to offer for anyone in the banking industry.”

BankExec Computer Simulation

BANKEEXEC

The BankExec computer simulation is utilized as the primary learning tool throughout Year 2 of the Advanced School of Banking. In BankExec students are assembled into teams of four to six people to run an $800 million bank. For a simulated period of two years, teams will make quarterly policy and operating decisions in a realistic banking environment.

Management teams will face competition from other similar size banks in the community, plus competition from outside the community.

The economic and regulatory environments are very similar to real life conditions. When the simulation is enhanced by board demands, competition and reviews by regulatory agencies, teams will find themselves facing two years of management experience in a 50-hour educational program.

Through BankExec, students have the opportunity to reinforce skills learned during the School and on the job, as well as experience current concepts in banking, management, accounting and economics.

Since BankExec is team-based, attendees will also learn about management, leadership, team building and decision-making skills while forming a strong network of industry contacts.

At the close of the School, teams will analyze the results of their management efforts in presentations to classmates and a Board of Directors composed of executive management from area financial institutions.
