The United States formally entered World War I on April 6th, 1917. By the time the war finally ended, on November 11, 1918, more than 2 million American soldiers had served on the battlefields of Western Europe, and some 50,000 of them had lost their lives. Meet your guide and driver in the Reception area of your hotel and set off on a memorable journey as you trace the footsteps of American soldiers in World War I, following an itinerary suggested by your guide based on venue opening hours, your interests, and time available.

Begin with a visit to the Museum of the Great War in Meaux, taking an in-depth look at the conflict and America's entry in 1917. Continue to Château-Thierry, a key site of the 1918 Marne battles. Visit the Hill 204 American Monument and the Quentin Roosevelt exhibit, then drive to Croix Rouge Farm, where Roosevelt was killed. Explore the haunting Belleau Wood—scene of fierce Marine combat—and walk among the preserved trenches and memorials. Visit the Aisne-Marne American Cemetery nearby, final resting place of over 2,200 soldiers, with a touching Memorial Chapel and Wall of the Missing. Lunch is at leisure along the route (not included).

Return to Paris with your driver and guide in the late afternoon; evening at your leisure.

Meet your guides and drivers in the Reception area of your hotel and take a journey back to Paris in wartime.

Begin your tour with the Arc of Triomphe and the Champs Élysées, where the Germans entered on 14 June 1940; eight days later, France accepted defeat, along with foreign Occupation. Learn about the everyday life of Parisians during the Occupation, the plight of the Jews, and the round-ups. Explore the Jewish quarter with its famous rue des Rosiers, and discover the Gestapo Headquarters in the 8th arrondissement and other sites related to the Occupation. Optionally, learn about the Resistance fighters and relive the last days of the Liberation—a critical and complicated period not only in the history of Paris but also in the history of the Second World War—during a visit of the Museum of the Order of the Liberation.

Your drivers will drop you off at your lunch venue at the end of the experience.
