

Closet Dread—It's Real.

Have you ever had a moment like this?

You're standing in front of your closet on a time-crunched morning staring at all the clothes hanging there. You feel more and more frustrated because you're trying to get dressed for your day, and you are NOT succeeding.

And the clock is ticking.

Maybe you've tried on a few outfits already, only to discard them because they don't feel right, or they don't look right, or they don't fit right. Far from making you feel confident—much less beautiful—your wardrobe is a source of dismay, perhaps even anxiety.

To Get Something Different, You Have To DO Something Different.

We've all had moments like this. Most of us have had many of them.

What is a busy woman to do? You don't have to work in a corporate office or out of the home to have this feeling. Stay-at-home moms, work-at-home moms (aren't ALL moms work-at-home moms?!), entrepreneurs and business owners—whether you have kids or not—all experience these moments of wardrobe overwhelm and wish their closets inspired that confidence that comes from feeling beautiful in your skin—AND the clothes you put over it, instead.

We all wish getting dressed every day, no matter what our day looks like, was simple, effortless, and part of a ritual that makes us feel beautiful—inside and out.

Obviously, you would do something different if you could, wouldn't you? To end the frustration of getting dressed, knowing you look your best, that your clothes suit you and convey your style which then gives you the confidence to feel your best—and reflect your unique beauty, wouldn't you do that if you could?

I am here to tell you, you can.
